Senate Sure To Seat Black As Foes Gird For Last Fight

Committee Defeats Plea to Delay Action for Study.

2 Members Near Blows in Debate

Copeland to Raise Klan Issue in Last-Ditch Stand Today.

By Robert C. Albright.

Without public hearings of any kind, the nomination of Senator Hugo L. Black to be a United States Supreme Court justice headed toward almost certain confirmation in the Senate today, over compact minority opposition.

By a 13-to-4 Judiciary Committee vote, the nomination was recommended to the Senate yesterday after a sharp exchange of personalities that nearly brought two members of the committee to fisticuffs.

A motion to delay a report until Black's qualifications and legal questions surrounding the court "vacancy" could be thoroughly explored was voted down, 11 to 5. Despite an expected Senate vote of more than 3 to 1 for confirmation, opponents will carry their fight to the Senate floor today.

Klan Airing Likely.

Senator Royal S. Copeland, Tammany candidate for mayor of New York, was expected to air for the first time in the Senate what he inferred were Black's connections with the Ku Klux Klan, and the Alabaman's reported Klan backing in his first race for the Senate.

Copeland, in New York yesterday, said "religious and social freedom is the fundamental principle of the American Government," and he regarded Black's nomination "as an insult to the American people."

"No man," said Copeland, "who was directly or indirectly connected with the Ku Klux Klan or was the beneficiary of its sympathy or support is fit for a place in any impartial tribunal and certainly not for place on the Supreme Court bench."

Near to Blows.

Bitter words over Black between Senator William H. Dieterich, of Illinois, one of the largest men in the Senate, and athletic Senator Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska, almost brought the two men to blows in the committee room, colleagues said.

Burke is the leading Democratic opponent of the Alabaman's nomination, and the portly Dieterich is Black's stanchest Administration advocate. Both Senators joked good-naturedly about the incident last night. Dieterich gave Burke a cigar, which he later smoked. Burke sent Dieterich a published article suggesting the Illinoisan as a Supreme Court candidate.

But tempers of both reached the breaking point at the committee meeting. Without mentioning names, Dieterich said issues raised against Black were an "insult" to the Alabaman, and some Senators were speaking too freely for the news-

End of NYA Seen By Mrs. Roosevelt

Bear Mountain, N. Y., Aug. 16 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt "unofficially" told 130 girls of Camp Jane Addams, maintained for unemployed young women on WPA rolls today, that National Youth Administration camps would be discontinued.

"I have no authority to make this statement," the President's wife said, "but it is my conclusion that the present expenditures of these camps do not justify their maintenance.

"I say this because something can be done for a greater number under some other plan."

Mrs. Roosevelt made her statement after several girls had asked her if the camp was to be discontinued.

House Passes Tax-Loophole Bill, 173 to 0

Sugar Compromise Plan Provokes Attack by Rep. McCormack.

By Sidney Olson.

With one eye on the clock, members of the House set the legislative stride at a faster pace yesterday by swishing through a tax-loophole plugging bill, 173 to 0, and then sending the sugar control bill to conference after a slashing floor battle.

Leaders had warned the membership a night session would be held if the tax bill dragged. Immediately the members moved to expedite the bill, and worked so fast they had passed it unanimously by dinner time.

A flaw in the adjournment strategy then developed, in the person of Representative John McCormack (Democrat), Massachusetts, who had an agreement for an hour-long speech. He began by denouncing a new Administration plan to end the long sugar bill battle by effecting, in House-Senate conference, a new compromise wherein the Senate's refined quota system would be limited to one year's operation. After that refined quotas would end. The raw sugar quotas would be effective for three years, however.

Declared Wedge.

McCormack charged this plan was an Administration wedge between the sugar producers and refiners. He asked that the House instruct its conferees against such a compromise proposal—a proposal the White House is likely to accept.

Representative James J. Lanzetta (Democrat), of New York, then made the point of no quorum, and Floor Leader Sam Rayburn, of Texas, asked for a roll call of the House.

Weary members already on the way to parked automobiles with visions of dinner, returned to the floor and the battle went on. At last, when McCormack had concluded, his motion to instruct was voted down, 178 to 85, and the House adjourned. Sugar-bloc leaders predicted last night such a conference report, if agreed to, would be approved by the President, and

Reds Depose State Chiefs For Treason

Drastic Shake-up Near as Two Commissars Are Ousted.

12 Executives Accused of Spying, Wrecking Economy.

By the United Press.

Moscow, Aug. 16.—A series of unexpected transfers, perhaps presaging the fall of several high Russian leaders, jolted Soviet officialdom tonight.

The two most important figures replaced by others and transferred to "new work" were Innokenti Khalepsky, one-time telegraph operator who rose to commissar of posts and telegraphs, and G. T. Grinko, veteran and well-known finance commisar.

Simultaneously it was revealed that Ivan Kraval, vice president of the important State Planning Commission and chief of the Statistical Administration, was removed from office and denounced, with more than a dozen associates, as "an enemy of the people."

Removed Last June.

The commission's official publication, Plan, said they were removed last June and accused them of "spying, and wrecking the Soviet union's national economy, disorganizing the planning system for vital defense industries, undermining agriculture and concealing the country's production and resources."

The Politburo, most powerful organization in the Soviet Union, stepped into the drastic reorganization, which swept the finance and post and telegraph ministries. The Politburo is the executive organ of the Communist Party and includes Joseph V. Stalin, Presider Michael I. Kalinin, Premier V. M. Molotov, War Commissar Klementi E. Voroshilov and six others.

Berman Canal Builder.

V. Y. Chubar, member of the Politburo, himself took over the finance commissariat, indicating the importance of the step. The fate of Grinko was mentioned tersely in a communique which said he was transferred to "new work."

M. D. Berman, who as vice commissar of the NKVD (Commissariat for Internal Affairs), was credited with building the Baltic-White Sea and Moscow-Volga canals, replaced Khalepsky in the commissariat for posts and telegraphs. Khalepsky also was "assigned to new work."

In the finance department, A. P. Grichmanoc was appointed first assistant commissar, and in the Commissariat for Internal Affairs (or posts and telegraphs) M. I. Rizhov was named vice commissar.

Man Kills Daughter To End Her Sufferings

Cheyenne, Wyo., Aug. 16 (AP).—Sam Levin, 50, shot and killed his 17-year-old daughter Sally today "to end her suffering from a mental ailment," Acting Police Chief Norbert Tuck said, and then wounded himself. Physicians reported Levin would recover.

District Attorney Robert G. Caldwell said he had prepared a petition to commit the girl to the State Hospital for the Insane.

Race Track Hearing Turns Into Morals, Economics Class

Morality, religion and economics were injected into a belated public hearing on a District race track bill before a sub-committee of the Senate District Committee yesterday.

Everybody agreed that there was nothing wrong in horse racing per se, and some acknowledged that they had no objection to Walter O'Hara, Rhode Island millionaire, spending a million or so to build a new track at Benning, D. C.

It is the proposed legalizing of gambling and betting on horse racing that brought the rub.

Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, a member of the sub-committee, suggested that horse racing might be conducted in the National Capital on the same scale as is done at county fairs in Kansas.

That idea didn't take, however, with Walter Kilbourne, O'Hara's spokesman, or with W. C. Murphy, of the Central Labor Union, who presented witnesses favoring the bill.

The measure, tabled last spring by an indignant House District Committee after being reported without hearings this session, has little or no chance of being enacted at this session.

The lure of a possible $700,000 a year in municipal revenue proved too much for several civic organization spokesmen in view of the recent local tax increases.

Washington ministers, however, were united in opposing a race track here on the ground that it is a destroyer of homes and public morality.

First Uncensored Account of Japanese Preparations for War Against Chinese

(James A. Mills, dean of Associated Press foreign correspondents, wirelessed from the S. S. President McKinley, en route from Japan to Shanghai, the first uncensored story of Japan's preparations for war in China.—Editor's note.)

By James A. Mills,
Associated Press Staff Correspondent.

On Board President McKinley, Between Kobe and Shanghai, Aug. 16.—I have left a Japan which is preparing for war in China grimly and on a huge scale, but without popular enthusiasm.

Japan soon will have 100,000 fighting men in China, but the masses at home, who ultimately must pay for it all, do not like the prospect. Under the stimulus of official propaganda, however, the nation has accepted the conflict reluctantly, as a bad job from which there is no backing down.

Already the people are restless under heavy taxation and the high cost of living, but still they deck their homes with Rising Sun flags and throng to the railway stations to chant "Banzai" as the troop trains roll out with their loads for China-bound transports.

Thousands to Follow.

The President McKinley, crossing the China Sea en route to the Shanghai battle zone, has passed transports carrying 20,000 troops to augment the army and navy forces already fighting in China, which I estimate at 80,000 men.

More thousands are to follow, for I have seen, in the China Sea and the narrow reaches of Japan's beautiful inland sea, convoys of Japanese transports returning home from China ports to take on new contingents.

Crossing Japan from Tokyo to Kobe I found all railway stations decorated with flags, banners and lanterns. At many there were wartime scenes as soldiers were cheered on their way to the China "fronts."

I passed numerous military trains loaded with artillery, motor trucks, tanks, armored motorcycles, artillery, all converging on the west Japan and inland sea ports. Many of those ports are closed to all but military activity.

Cabinet Gets Jolt.

The government has not yet ordered general mobilization, but the Empire actually is on a wartime footing. In Japan it is possible to call scores of thousands of reserves to the colors without formal mobilization and without public announcement.

The Japanese people, who have access to no accounts of the conflict except what their government wants them to read, mostly believe their

Faint Signals Speed Search For Russians

Rescue Planes Converging on Polar Area to Aid 6 Soviet Fliers.

By the Associated Press.

Fairbanks, Alaska, Aug. 16.—Ice caps of the Arctic echoed the roar of rescue planes today as the search for six Russian fliers gained new impetus from reports that radio signals had been received from their missing airliner.

From both sides of the North Pole aviators converged on the winter-gridden area in which Pilot Sigismund Levaneffsky and five companions were believed forced down. They left Moscow for Fairbanks last Thursday.

The latest message to be attributed to their plane was received by the Soviet government radio station at Irkutsk, Siberia. The Soviet Embassy at Washington said that at 3:23 a. m. (Eastern standard time) today radio signals "of a weak and irregularly working transmitter" were heard at Irkutsk on the lost craft's frequency, and that "there is strong belief the signals actually came from the plane."

Jimmy Mattern, noted American flier who was rescued by Levaneffsky after a forced landing in Siberia four years ago, rocketed into Fairbanks today after a record nonstop flight from Oakland, Calif.—the Russian fliers' ultimate goal. Mattern said he would take up the search immediately and remain in the area as long as there was hope for the Russians.

Wilkins at Embassy.

Sir Hubert Wilkins and his associate Vilhjalmur Stefansson, noted Arctic explorers, yesterday called on Constantine A. Oumansky, counselor of the Soviet Embassy, to discuss a co-ordinated plan of action in the search for the missing Levaneffsky plane. The Soviet Embassy declined comment on plans discussed.

Cummings' Aides Discover 'Errors' In Justice Murals

Although they like the artistry of Louis Bouche, New York lawyer, Justice Department attorneys fear he is not realistic.

Bouche has finished some paintings near the office of Attorney General Cummings, dramatizing the administration of justice. Aides of Cummings yesterday pointed out the following "errors."

The Statue of Liberty faces shoreward instead of seaward.

A convict faces four members of the Federal Court of Parole, although actually he faces only one in real life.

The mural shows fire starting in a large city, although Federal investigators work only on such arson cases as occur in Indian reservations.

Walker Is Handed Life-Time Income

New York, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—Former Mayor James J. Walker today was appointed assistant counsel to the Democratic-controlled transit commission—a job which will qualify him for a life-time city pension estimated at $12,000 to $15,000 a year. Walker, who resigned under fire in 1932, will receive $1,000 a month salary. He will need to serve only 30 days to qualify for the pension.

The appointment was made with only two weeks to spare. Under the law he could obtain the pension only by occupying a city office when he reached the age of 55. Walker will be 55 on September 1.

Rebels Capture Reinosa; Move On Santander

Insurgents Within 40 Miles of Goal in Northwestern Spain.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Aug. 16.—The insurgent northern war machine drove through crumbling government resistance and swept past Reinosa today toward Santander, about 40 miles beyond.

If Insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco captures Santander the government's last port on the Bay of Biscay, he will have completed his campaign in northwest Spain.

Insurgent forces then would dominate such ports as Bilbao, Irun, San Sebastian and Santander. They would hold the province of Santander eastward through the Basque Provinces. Their naval patrol would blockade the remaining government-held coast, and their powerful northern army would be free to turn to other war zones.

Grant for Jefferson Memorial In Deficiency Bill Stirs Fight

A spirited fight in the House today over a $500,000 deficiency appropriation as a beginner for the Thomas Jefferson Memorial in the Tidal Basin was forecast last night by opponents of the plan.

The House Appropriations Committee sprung a surprise by including the item in the third and last deficiency bill after previously holding it up while the Tidal Basin site was under fire.

Members who have voiced frequent objections to the site chosen by the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission immediately began discussing ways and means of defeating the fund.

One plan that may be tried, it is understood, will be to seek to amend the appropriations bill by tacking on the Treadway measure which would block construction of the memorial in the Tidal Basin.

Representative Boylan (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the commission, said he would be glad to explain to the House the hitherto undisclosed "modified" plan for the memorial.

Under the modification, he said, the memorial would not change the lines of the Tidal Basin nor disturb the famed cherry trees.

The Appropriations Committee reported the item apparently without hearings and made no mention of the site controversy.

U.S. Marines Rush To Aid in War Zone

Food Runs Low in Besieged City and Prices Soar.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Tuesday), Aug. 17.—A thousand frantic foreigners—including nearly 350 American women and children—were fleeing from Shanghai today, running a gantlet of shellfire down the muddy Whangpoo toward the Yangtze and the sea.

While no absolute evacuation had been ordered, American Consular and naval authorities hurried departure of women and children.

The Dollar liner President Hoover raced here from Manila with a shipload of United States Marines, and prepared to take on refugees from this shell-torn city.

More than 200 Americans departed aboard the President Taft, and 25 American women and 13 children left Nanking at midnight for Hankow aboard the S. S. Wussung.

Refugees Pass Guns.

To reach the big liners, anchored out in the Yangtze, foreigners were forced to pass under the blazing guns of Japanese warships, locked in battle with Chinese troops entrenched on the mud flats across the Whangpoo.

Booking offices were jammed. At the Dollar Line offices 150 reservations for the President Jefferson were purchased an hour after booking lists were opened.

The President Taft left Monday, the Jefferson was due to depart today and tomorrow the President McKinley will arrive to take off foreign residents.

Preference was given expectant mothers, elderly women and those with families. Steamship officials said they would arrange deck space, crowding the evacuating steamers to capacity.

Food Becomes Scarce.

Meanwhile Shanghai was a war-bound city. Prices of meals skyrocketed as the food supplies became scarce. Everywhere were scenes of confusion and terror.

A United Press correspondent was at the customs jetty as the tenders prepared to shove off for the President Taft when three Chinese war planes roared overhead. Instantly a salvo from the Japanese flagship Idzumo, anchored a few hundred yards downstream, answered the aerial attack.

Occupants of the tenders were in panic.

Scores sprinted for the customs inspection shed and up the front steps of the custom house, trampling each others' feet to squeeze through the iron gate which an attendant was clanging shut.

Huddled there, they watched the Chinese planes elude the Idzumo's batteries and disappear over Chapei.

Consular officials said those evacuating must pay cash for their tickets or make arrangements with steamship officials.

Shanghai, (Tuesday), Aug. 17.—The Japanese third battle fleet turned the full fury of its big guns on shell-shattered Shanghai today and reinforced Japanese land forces launched a furious battle for possession of the city.

The bombardment, which began at dawn, covered up landing of regular Japanese army troops at the mouth of the Whangpoo River. The Japanese flagship Idzumo, which was struck by a Chinese torpedo last night, joined in the attack.

Chinese mortars and heavy artillery blazed in reply.

Death Toll Now 4,000.

The greatest aerial war in the history of the Orient was under way above and about Shanghai. More than 200 Japanese and Chinese planes were locked in combat.

The battle raged while 4,000 Americans were being hurried out of the city.

One hundred and fifty thousand Chinese and Japanese were fighting on land, sea and in the air.

The death toll from the conflict raging around this city of 3,500,000 was estimated at more than 4,000, including military casualties.

Chinese attacked the Japanese fleet in the Whangpoo and off its mouth with everything they had—airplanes, land batteries and finally tiny "suicide destroyers"—armored, high-speed motorbtoas, each carrying a crew of six and two torpedoes.

It was one of the "suicide destroyers" that attempted to torpedo the Japanese flagship. Japanese naval guns sank the tiny craft after its torpedoes exploded near the Idzumo. Two of the Chinese crew, shattered by wounds, were saved.

Advance units of the opposing armies clashed at the Chungshing road area of Chapei, Chinese section of Shanghai. The Japanese naval

Crosley Refutes Radio Power Monopoly Accusations in Answer to Payne

WLW Operator Insists on Right To Sell 'Time'

Chairman of Commission Calls Session After Getting Reply.

In the midst of reported controversy within the Federal Communications Commission over the Crosley Radio Corporation's' operation of Station WLW, the commission chairman, Eugene O. Sykes, has called a special meeting of the commissioners for tomorrow, it was learned last night.

Coincidental with information Judge Sykes had called the meeting was publication here of a reply by Powel Crosley, jr., head of the radio firm, to FCC Commissioner George H. Payne's charges WLW's experimental license has been used to obtain undue profits from commercial operation.

Crosley couched his answer to Payne in biting phrases. He denied his company had refused to submit data requested by Payne. He denied Payne's authority to request such data as were asked in the last letter of the commissioner, and said his firm has not unduly increased its rates.

Assails Implication.

He said one implication of Payne's was "libelous" and concluded by refusing to furnish any of the data Payne asked.

Judge Sykes said last night he had called the meeting tomorrow "to consider commission business," but added that "it has absolutely nothing to do with Mr. Payne and that matter." He said, in response to questions, however, that "of course, any commissioner has a right to bring up anything he chooses at the meetings."

Payne made his charges public Monday. He has ordered the corporation to answer questions regarding WLW by September 13. WLW broadcasts at 500,000 watts—the most powerful station in the country—and, Payne claims, is thus ble to "blanket" 11 States with its programs.

Criticism Hinted.

The meeting, which Payne termed "most unusual," was called immediately after his ultimatum to Crosley was made public. There were indications Payne will be sharply criticized for his "one-man fight" on Crosley.

In a statement last night Crosley said in part:

"The delay in sending it (the date) is due wholly to your own unwillingness to accord our representative the courtesy of a meeting and the statement that until we receive further word from you we might withhold sending the letter."

In reply to the charge the Crosley company operated a "monopoly" in the 500,000-watt field, Crosley said his concern established the first 5,000-watt station and the first 50,000-watt station.

Charge Fully Denied.

"When it was proved efficient and useful many permits to other stations were granted and still are in operation," Crosley wrote of this previous experimental work.

He denied flatly Payne's charge the commission's rules "definitely prohibit" collecting commercial profits from experimentation.

"On the contrary," Crosley wrote, "there are numerous experimental permits held by radio stations other than WLW all over the United States on which commercial business is being done, and I assume being reported in the course of routine to the commission."

Charge Held Insidious.

Crosley termed "insidious" Payne's questioning of the former's motives in inviting the commissioner to attend the all-star baseball game here as Crosley's guest. Crosley said that "it was my feeling . . . that I should like to know you better personally, although I had, contrary to your statement in your letter, met you previously." He added that "as it turned out" he was unable to be here for the game.

Charges attributed by Payne to Representative W. D. McFarland (Democrat), of Texas, that WLW had raised its rates 50 per cent, were refuted by Crosley with the statement the increase had been "20 per cent, although the increase in power was 1,000 per cent.

Politics and People

Eligibility of Black for Supreme Court Seems Questionable Under Constitutional Provision.

By Franklyn Waltman

ONE of the most amazing aspects of the situation on Capitol Hill in regard to the nomination of Senator Hugo L. Black to the Supreme Court is the callous indifference to the letter of the Constitution on the part of a large number of Senators who only a few weeks ago had worked themselves into rages of anger over President Roosevelt's attempt to violate the spirit of the Constitution with his judiciary reorganization plan.

WALTMAN.

Senators who only a month ago feverishly contended—and rightly so—that the Roosevelt scheme to add six additional justices to the Supreme Court at one stroke violated the spirit of the Constitution, now even refuse, apparently because one of their number is involved, to open the Constitution to take a look at the second paragraph of section 2, article 1, of that document.

This paragraph reads as follows: "No Senator or Representative shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States, which shall have been created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time."

The meaning of that inhibition is plain to anyone. It means no member of Congress is eligible, during the term for which he was elected, for any Presidential appointment to any office—outside the Army and Navy—which has been created, or the "emoluments whereof shall have been increased." By reason of the passage of the McCarran-Sumners Supreme Court retirement act last March, Senator Black is, under that section of the Constitution, ineligible for appointment to the Supreme Court. Not only is this plain to the layman, but it is the view taken by outstanding lawyers friendly to the New Deal.

There is no dispute whatever that Senator Black would have been constitutionally ineligible, until his present term ended, to be appointed to the Supreme Court as one of the proposed six additional justices, if the President's bill had been adopted. There can be no dispute that if Congress last March had voted, effective at once, to increase the salaries of Supreme Court justices to $25,000 a year that Senator Black would be ineligible at this time for appointment to the Court.

Thus the present controversy revolves around the meaning of the word "emoluments" as used in the Constitution. Webster defines the word "emolument" to mean: "profit from office, employment or labor; compensation; fees or salary" and differentiates between "emolument" and "wages" by explaining that "emolument applies to whatever profits arise from office or employment."

From this it will be seen that the word "emoluments" is not merely synonymous with the word "compensation" or "salary," but also includes "whatever profits arise from office or employment." Reading of the journal of the Constitutional Convention makes it clear that the framers of the Constitution intended it to be so.

Their purpose was to make it impossible for members of Congress to create or fatten up Federal jobs for themselves under the influence of the Executive branch of the Government. Indeed, in its original form in the Constitution this clause would have made a member of Congress ineligible for appointment during his terms (and for a Senator during one year after his term ended) to any office under authority of the United States irrespective of when it was created or whether the emoluments had been increased.

In Article II, Section 1, the framers of the Constitution clearly indicated they intended the word "emolument" should be more inclusive and sweeping than the word "compensation."

Paragraph 7 of this section reads:

"The President shall, at stated times, receive for his services a compensation, which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the period for which he may have been elected, and he shall not receive within that period any other emolument from the United States or any of them."

The framers did not say that "he shall not receive within that period any other compensation," because they wished to bar all forms of gifts and profits to the President in excess of his duly voted "compensation" or salary. How broad this language is can be judged from an observation of Prof. Edward S. Corwin of Princeton University—one of the New Deal's favorite constitutional authorities—in his book: "The Constitution and What It Means Today."

"A decision of the Supreme Court, rendered in 1920," Prof. Corwin wrote, "holds that the salary of a judge of the United States would be 'diminished' contrary to Article III, Section 1, by the application to it of a general income tax which was levied after the judge took office.

"Clearly, the same rule would apply to the President's salary, and furthermore, since this may not be 'increased' during his term, and he may receive 'no other emolument from the United States,' a general income tax in force when he took office must be maintained at the same rate during such term, and not only as to his salary, but also as to his income from private sources, even though repealed as to everybody else's income."

Prof. Corwin recited this contention, apparently, to demonstrate what he regarded as the absurdity of the Court's exemption of judges from any increases in the income tax. But it makes crystal clear the distinction to be made between the words "compensation" and "emolument" as used in the Constitution.

Now what are the facts in regard to an "increase" in the "emoluments" of the justices of the Supreme Court? Prior to last March a Supreme Court associate justice received $20,000 a year. He was appointed for life. There was no guaranteed retirement privilege. When he became old or ill, his only recourse was to become a burden on the Court or resign.

If he resigned after the age of 70 years and after serving 10 years, he could expect Congress would continue his pay in an appropriation act. But he had no assurance of this and in the case of Oliver Wendell Holmes the expectation was not fulfilled.

The venerable Holmes resigned from the Court at the age of 91 years, after 29 years service on its bench. Although he lived three more years, he received the full $20,000 salary of a Supreme Court associate justice less than six months after his resignation—and was subject to the Federal income tax, which the Court in 1920 had ruled, as pointed out, constituted a diminution of the salary. But that was only the beginning of the diminution of his salary.

Less than six months after he resigned his salary was reduced to $10,000 a year, and that was further reduced by another provision of the economy act of June 2, 1932. This reduced salary was in effect one year. Then Holmes' salary was increased to $17,000. Later it went up to $18,000 and then $19,000, as the restrictive provisions of Federal economy were lessened—but he died before it was restored to the full amount.

In the period during which Holmes' salary was thus reduced, efforts to reduce the salaries of "retired" Federal district and circuit judges were overthrown by Supreme Court rulings, on the basis of the 1919 judiciary retirement act, which made no provision for Supreme Court justices. Thus it was clear that at that time district and circuit judges enjoyed an "emolument" denied to Supreme Court justices.

The purpose of the McCarran-Sumners Supreme Court retirement act was to eliminate this discrimination between justices of the highest tribunal and judges of the district and circuit courts. Its purpose was to give Supreme Court justices the same emoluments the others had. In that act, passed last March, during the term which Senator Black is now serving, Congress made it possible for a Supreme Court justice to "retire" and thus have guaranteed to him the payment of his full salary for the remainder of his life, provided he was more than 70 years old and had served ten years on the bench.

The condition that the beneficiary of this legislations should serve ten years indicates that the retired pay is not gratuity but is a part of the "profit of the office and consequently an "emolument." Thus there is a greater profit to be derived from the office now than before last March.

Let us put it another way. Suppose Justice Owen J. Roberts, when he was named to the Supreme Court in 1930 at the age of 55, had desired to have an income of $20,000 a year guaranteed to him for the remainder of his life beginning at the age of 70. If he did not wish to take a chance on Congress, he would have been required to buy an annuity containing such provisions. Such an annuity would have cost him a goodly part of his salary as an associate justice.

But Senator Black, if he is confirmed to the court, can now, at the age of 51, feel assured he will have a guaranteed income of $20,000 annually after he passes the age of 70, irrespective of the state of his health or whether he remains on the court beyond that age—and without the cost of a single penny to him. If that is not increasing the emolument or profit of the office, what is?

Incidentally, the Constitutional provision now raised against Senator Black always has been strictly interpreted by the Attorneys General of the United States. It was interpreted to bar the appointment of Samuel J. Kirkwood as a tariff commissioner, although he had resigned from the Senate some months before the office was created, because such action occurred during the term for which he was elected. It was interpreted to hold ineligible Senator Matt Ransom for appointment ten days before his term ended, as Minister to Mexico because the salary of that office had been increased during his term—even though he did not take the oath of office until his term expired.

It was interpreted to make Senator Philander C. Knox ineligible for appointment as Secretary of State in 1909 because during his term the salary of all Cabinet officers had been increased $4,000. Congress recognized Knox's disqualification and passed a special resolution repealing the increase in salary insofar as it applied to the Secretary of State—and so irregular was that action regarded that the resolution had to be railroaded through the House and finally passed by the comparatively close vote of 148 to 129.

Thus it seems impossible for the Senate to dodge this question of Senator Black's constitutional eligibility, unless that body wishes to give reality to those words of Tammany's Timothy Campbell—which set the country roaring with laughter 50 years ago—when he waved aside President Cleveland's protest that a certain action was unconstitutional by asserting: "What the hell is the Constitution among friends?"

Senate Group Orders Study Of U. S. Relief

Byrnes' Committee Will Direct Efforts Toward Jobless Census.

A thoroughgoing Senate study into Administration relief policies with a view to permanent legislation next session yesterday was ordered by a special Senate committee, headed by Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina.

Following an organization meeting of the group, Byrnes disclosed that immediate efforts will be directed toward an unemployment census, on which specific relief measures could be based.

An unemployment census bill already has passed the Senate, and is now pending in the House. Byrnes indicated steps were being taken to assure a census through other legislative means, should the bill become caught in the House jam.

'Policies' Studied.

The South Carolinian, named by the Vice President to head the special Senate committee after the Senate several weeks ago authorized a relief study, said the group's efforts will be directed at "policies" rather than specific complaints of individuals.

Allan Johnstone, of Newberry, S. C., formerly an official of WPA, was named counsel of the committee.

"For the next 30 to 60 days we will study the activities of Government agencies, bearing on the question of unemployment," Byrnes said. "We propose to obtain the views of WPA, State directors and others.

Seek Better Training.

"The policies of the National Youth Administration will be examined, with a view to determining its permanency. We will make a study of the CCC. In particular we want to consider the training being given people on WPA rolls, to see whether they are or can be instructed in skills and trades to better fit them to take their places in private industry."

Byrnes said "cost" features, in particular, will be examined, as well as the ability of relief project sponsors to make larger contributions toward their cost. After preliminary surveys, the committee will meet around November 1, Byrnes said, to determine the advisability of public hearings.

Youth Is Drowned In Anacostia River

Frederick Green, 16-year-old colored boy, was drowned yesterday afternoon while swimming with two companions in the Anacostia River, near the Pennsylvania railroad bridge.

His body, recovered by harbor police after two hours dragging, was taken to the District Morgue where the father, Thomas L. Green, 1021 Thirteenth street southeast, identified it. A certificate of accidental death was issued by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald.

The boy's two companions were "Sunnie" Conley, 700 block of Seventh street southeast, and Richard West, 1000 block of Tenth street southeast. They said that Green, who was not a strong swimmer, went down suddenly before they could reach him.

House Committee Follows Senate in Pledging Right-of-Way to Farm Bills at Next Session.

FARMER RIGHT-OF-WAY, legislatively, was indorsed yesterday by the House Agriculture Committee, following in the footsteps of the Senate, when it approved the Bilbo resolutions pledging Congress to take up general agricultural stabilization before anything else is considered at the next session of Congress.

The committee amended the resolution to include proposals that the permanent legislation continue the present soil conservation act, that provision be made for extensive research work to develop new uses for farm products and that the Agriculture Department be given authority to work for lower freight rates on farm commodities.

The amendment called for simplification of the soil conservation act and reduced benefit payments to larger farm operators.

A BARNWELL, S. C., EDITOR'S chart of a cotton-aid program was laid before the committee by Representative Fulmer, of the editor's State. Ben P. Davies, the Barnwell writer, suggested issuance of debentures to farmers on cotton's exportable surplus. The debentures would be in the amount the world market price was lower than parity. Payments to farmers to give them parity prices on cotton consumed in this country also would be made. Contracts with the Government to reduce acreage, if necessary, would be exacted and a tariff levied on the staple equivalent to the difference between world price and parity.

COLORS SPARKLED all over the Senate debate yesterday. Senator White did everything but call Senator Black, Supreme Court nominee, a red. Senator Green defended Black in what one observer termed true-blue fashion.

Both Senatorial Browns remained out of the fray.

FEDERAL LOANS AND GRANTS to States for elimination of stream pollution were approved by the Senate.

The measure would authorize the Federal Government to contribute one-third of the cost of labor and materials of any anti-pollution project. States, cities, individuals or companies would be eligible for allotments.

In addition, it would permit appropriation of $700,000 a year for expenditures by States for investigation and surveys and $300,000 a year for administration by the Public Health Service.

Senator Bilbo, of Mississippi, offered a bill for payment of a flat $15 monthly as the Federal share of benefits to the needy aged.

In her first address on a legislative subject since coming to the Senate in 1931, Senator Caraway of Arkansas declared she was "content" despite President Roosevelt's veto of a resolution which she had introduced.

She referred to the Presidential veto of a resolution which would have instructed Army engineers to prepare a comprehensive program for flood control, soil conservation and use of hydro-electric power to Congress.

The President said in vetoing the resolution he believed the Army engineers should not be the agency to prepare a plan so comprehensive in scope. He told Congress he would send a comprehensive plan in January.

"Immediate action for the prevention of loss of life and property is what we want most," Mrs. Caraway told the Senate.

Her address was brief, but friends said it reflected her determination to take a more active part in the discussion of legislation on the Senate floor.

Although she is active as a committee member, Mrs. Caraway has never before addressed the Senate except to announce the death of her colleague, the late Majority Leader Robinson, and to speak briefly on the deaths of other Senators.

THE HOUSE COMPLETED Congressional action on a bill authorizing a $25,587,456 Army housing program. The measure now goes to the White House.

Final action came when the House accepted Senate amendments adding approximately $4,126,768 to the bill.

The measure authorizes construction and improvement of housing facilities at a large number of Army posts in accordance with recommendations of the War Department.

Poetic Senior Hunted as Killer of Pretty Co-ed at Kentucky Mountain College

Victim's Father Gets Warrant For Her Suitor

Girl's Kin Says Fugitive Sought to Wed Her in High School Days.

By the Associated Press.

Berea, Ky., Aug. 16.—George E. Wells, 20-year-old Berea senior, who had been trying to marry pretty Opal Sturgill, 18, since they went to the same mountain school five years ago, was charged today with murdering her. He had not been apprehended.

The warrant was sworn out by Marion Louis Sturgill, well-to-do farmer of Lawrence County, who hastened here after his daughter, a Berea sophomore, was shot to death on the campus last night while walking with William Anderson, another Berea student.

Police said Anderson nam Wells as the man who, after threatening the girl because she refused to talk privately to him, had suddenly stepped out of some bushes as they neared the administration building and shot her three times with a pistol.

The coed died without regaining consciousness. Anderson said the man fled through a thicket adjoining the campus.

Wells is a handsome, quiet youth who wrote poetry and worked as a bookbinder in the college printing shop to help earn his tuition. Opal Sturgill worked in the department where tasks are assigned to the students. They went to high school together near Auxier. Wells home in Floyd County. Later Miss Sturgill's family moved to Lawrence County and she was graduated last year at Blaine High School, 5 miles from her home. Opal's brother, Glenn Sturgill, said Wells had tried to marry Opal ever since they met in high school, but she had refused.

The girl was graduated last spring as honor student and valedictorian of her high school class, and entered Berea last fall.

Wanted by the police since September 4, 1934, Norris was cornered in his hideout, having in his possession a sawed-off shotgun, a 30-30 rifle, two shotguns and two automatic pistols. Two other participants of the bank robbery, Frank Lee Callahan and Taylor Marshall Whichard previously had been arrested by police.

Norris is in a hospital near Rogers, Ark., and will shortly be removed to Fort Worth, Tex., to face State charges of armed robbery. He is 25 years of age. He is also wanted by Mississippi for an attempted robbery of the Bank of Lake, Lake, Miss.

Tearful Blonde Indicted in Two Poison Deaths

Nonchalant Air Vanishes as Jury Charges Mass Murder Suspect.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Aug. 16.—Her eyes red from tears, blonde Mrs. Anna Hahn accepted service in Hamilton County Jail today on indictments accusing her of the poison slayings of two elderly Germans.

Gone was the laughing, nonchalant, debonair air she displayed last Friday, when her attorneys lost a legal move to obtain her release on a habeas corpus.

The grand jury, acting speedily, returned the indictments within 15 minutes after hearing police report on evidence gathered in what Prosecutor Dudley Miller Outcalt termed "the biggest mass murder in this country."

The brief indictments charged Mrs. Hahn with the "malicious and premeditated" slayings of George Gsellman, 67, who died July 6, and Jacob Wagner, 78, who died June 3, leaving an unwitnessed will naming Mrs. Hahn a beneficiary. Police charged the will was forged. Arraignment was set for Wednesday.

As the grand jury acted, police declared they would center their investigation on the deaths of Wagner, Gsellman, George Obendoerfer, 67, and Albert Palmer, 72, working only incidentally on seven other deaths they said might be linked with Mrs. Hahn.

Sinking Earth Peril Spreading in Idaho

Buhl, Idaho, Aug. 16 (AP).—Throbbing land that "rumbled when we stomped our feet" marked the path for investigators today as they explored a "sinking valley" steadily crumbling a rich Idaho farm section.

A party of newsmen roamed over the heaving floor of the new-formed area and said the geological disturbance was spread over a region 1½ miles long and a half a mile wide.

An all-day survey of the region eight miles northwest of this southern Idaho town brought more apprehension to farmers.

Exploration showed that the course of the nearby Little Salmon River is being narrowed and a large area of farm land, bordering the river, is breaking away and leaning over the water.

Herbert Hoover, Baby's Cooing Provide Inspiration for Quilt

Historical Bedcover Contains Parts of Clothing of Such Notables as Presidents, Duke of Windsor, Mae West and Mary Pickford.

When a determined woman sets out to make a quilt and takes six years for its completion that's plenty of work.

Mrs. Ethel Sampson, of Evanston, Ill., came to Washington yesterday and with her she brought the "Famous Historical Quilt" as it is designated in Library of Congress records.

"About six years ago," said Mrs. Sampson, "my family was seated around our living room watching my granddaughter, Nancy Fay, then 6 months old, looking at ads in a magazine."

"Now, just about that time, I had completed a 'crazy quilt' in which I used old rags and clothing, and I wanted to make another one, so badly, but I didn't know what to use," she continued.

"Just then, Nancy Fay said 'goo' and we all jumped, and there she was pointing at an ad which read, 'Write to the President.' Right then and there I decided to write to Mr. Herbert Hoover and ask him for a tie or something with which to make a quilt."

Lon Journey.

That started the "historical quilt." It was a long journey on the road to complete the patchwork. Mrs. Sampson would look in the daily papers each day for persons who were "making the news." A kindly letter sent to these famous personages asking for a piece of material or a tie or the parts of a pair of trousers very seldom met refusal.

The quilt, about 12 feet square, has a border of gold braid. At the top center is a panel of the gown worn by Mary Pickford in one of her movies. America's sweetheart sent this material to Mrs. Sampson.

Scattered about the quilt are ties, collars, strips of material from a gown of a first lady and other colorful pieces of garments. Bing Crosby is represented with a white tie he used during the filming of "The Big Broadcast."

First Lady Represented.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt obliged with a part of the lining of one of the President's coats. Then there is a tie from Irvin Cobb, noted humorist; a green tie from Postmaster James Farley; one from Senator Rush D. Holt, and the diapers from the five famous girls, the Dionne quintuplets.

Mae West sent her four pieces of red and green satin which was part of the gowns she wore in the filming of the picture "Diamond Lil."

Reaching out across the Atlantic, Mrs. Sampson was successful in her request of ties from Emperor Halie Selassie. She received two from Selassie. Even Selassie's personal doctor wanted to be included. So he packed two of his own ties. Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd gave her four ties.

A letter has been sent to the Duchess of Windsor asking her for some material. The Duke of Windsor already has sent her a linen envelope from Buckingham Palace.

Oh, yes, she's not through with it yet. It will grow and grow, as long as people will part with ties and collars.

District Airport Improvement Action Delayed

King, Awaiting House Vote on Camp Springs, Asks Reconsideration.

Prospects for legislation at this session of Congress to provide a safer airport here were somewhat lessened yesterday when Senator William H. King, of Utah, asked for reconsideration of the Copeland bill, which had already passed the Senate.

Senator King said last night he wanted to know what the House was going to do with the Senate bill to provide a Federal commercial airport at Camp Springs. He expressed fear that if legislation for the improvement of Washington Airport were passed by Congress at this time, that no action would be taken to provide a permanent solution of the ten year old controversy.

Another point of view was expressed by Representative J. Mark Wilcox, of Florida, who has been fighting for the improvement of the present airport at the other end of the Capitol. Pointing out the May bill, which differs considerably from the Copeland bill, had been stripped of controversial details, Representative Wilcox said last night that he "hoped to see the principal hazard at Washington Airport removed, and had favored the May bill as assuring the elimination of Military road."

House members yesterday expressed their willingness to agree to the Senate proposal to fill in Boundary Channel lagoon, if the matter were ever presented to them, but Senator King's action may delay the time, when the bill will receive the consideration of the conferees. House conferees named yesterday are Representatives Andrew J. May, of Kentucky; R. Ewing Thomason, of Texas; J. Mark Wilcox, of Florida; Walter G. Andrews, of New York, and Dewey Short, of Missouri.

Differ in Details.

The Copeland and May bills differ in several important respects. The Copeland bill provides for the transfer of title of the Military road right of way to the airport, while the measure passed by the House would permit the War Department to lease the same strip of land to the airport for 25 years. Under the Senate measure, introduced by Chairman Royal S. Copeland, of the Senate Commerce Committee, 53 acres of Arlington Experimental Farm would be leased to the terminal for 25 years for $1 a year, and the lagoon would be filled in for use as part of the landing field.

The May bill, on the other hand, provides that the lagoon shall remain and that the experimental farm shall be leased to the terminal "for airport purposes" for 25 years under terms and conditions to be prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Await Copeland's Return.

Representative May, sponsor of the House measure, said yesterday that he had asked the Speaker not to return the Copeland bill to the Senate until after Senator Copeland returns to the city today. "We may be able to work out some arrangement which will suit Senator King," he said.

If the two bills are considered by a conference committee, agreement on a compromise seems assured, Congressional leaders said yesterday. Representative R. Ewing Thomason, of Texas, declared he would be "disposed" to agree to the filling in of the lagoon if the Senate demanded it, and willingness to agree to a compromise was also expressed by Representatives Wilcox and May.

Downs has been under suspension since his arrest last March. He was free on a $2,000 bond.

Heat

Many people at the new Interior Building (the much-proclaimed building that has everything) are complaining ever more loudly of the terrific heat in the main lobby . . . The building, they wail, is air-conditioned in all parts excepting the main lobby . . . And 10,000 or more people pass through—sometimes congregate in—the main lobby every day . . . They are looking forward to the promise that something will be done about the heat in the lobby . . . But fulfillment of promises takes time . . . Anyhow, the merciful frosts of October aren't far off.

Beckwith Again

Late last week we related how happily surprised a Washingtonian was upon finding so much courtesy extended him by a guard at an Interior Department door . . . He wondered who the guard was . . . The name is C. M. Beckwith, the same Beckwith who has come in for so much praise because of his courtesy.

N. F. F. E. Meetings

Meetings announced by the National Federation of Federal Employes for this week are as follows: Today, 12 noon, Civil Service Commission Branch, Local No. 2, at Civil Service Commission; tomorrow, 8 p. m., D. C. Federation of Federal Employes Unions, 710 Fourteenth street northwest; Friday, 5 p. m., Executive Council, Local No. 2, 710 Fourteenth street northwest, and 4:30 p. m., Bureau of Standards, Local No. 260, at the bureau.

Interesting Group

The sun never sets on the members of Local No. 349, N. F. F. E. Its headquarters are in Paris and its representatives and members are in 30 countries.

The group was organized in March, 1929, by 25 American employes in the United States Embassy at the French capital. The national office granted a charter on March 29 of that year and every worker in the Embassy joined up.

Of the union's beginning, the national office people recall: "The union was almost immediately extended to the Consulate General in Paris, as well as to other Government services in the French capital. The local at first was restricted to the employes in Europe, Asia, Asia Minor and Africa, but as it was found impracticable to form other unions in the foreign service, the constitution was amended to include all members of the Government service outside the continental limits of the United States."

There followed a spread of membership throughout Europe and Asia Minor. The widespread members were contacted by a bulletin, "The Foreign Service Employe." It became soon necessary to appoint representatives in the different countries to cope with varying local conditions and to communicate more readily with the members. These representatives furnished the local with facts on conditions affecting members in their jurisdiction and this system of representation has been continued to the present time.

There is a plan in the offing that will extend this representation and keep the local at all times in closer touch with its membership. The local's officers are H. Stewart Beers, president, Florence Palmer, first vice president; M. F. de Barneville, second vice president; Mrs. Hilda Cousins, third vice president; James R. Connelly, secretary, and Maurice E. Banigan, treasurer.

The graduate school of the Department of Agriculture, which opens its 1937-38 school year the week of September 20, has announced its subjects, but has this to say: Those desiring courses in subjects not included in the program should confer with others interested to see if there are enough applicants to make a self-supporting class. The minimum number required in most cases is 15, but special arrangements may be made with the approval of the instructors for the conduct of smaller classes. Special series of lectures, not included in the school's preliminary statement, will be announced from time to time as plans for these are completed.

Employes of the Census Bureau and their friends will go for a moonlight cruise aboard the S. S. Potomac this evening. The party will leave the Seventh Street Wharf at 8:45 o'clock. Proceeds from the event will be used to help finance the recreation program of the bureau. Franklin J. Lillard is the general chairman.

The bowling league sponsored by the National Federation of Federal Employes expects to get off to a fast start about the middle of next month. Acting Secretary Eddie Collins has engaged alleys and rounded up teams from several departments, but openings still remain. Members of the federation who are interested in a liberal handicap league are requested to attend a meeting to be held at the federation rooms on Fourteenth street on Thursday evening, August 26, at 7:30 o'clock. Plans for the season will be arranged in detail. Officers will be elected.

Court Permits Gypsy Monarch To Settle Camp Theft Case

Victim Says 'King' Will Straighten Out Matters; Cupid Also May Be Factor in Ultimate Decision of 'His Majesty.'

In a gypsy camp in nearby Virginia, a stone's throw from the Washington Airport, yesterday sat Mike T. Frank, of Spanish descent, talking of his daughter, Rose, 15, and her "Irish gypsy" boy friend, Jess Willard Riley, 19, also encamped on the grounds.

Sitting in a tent which Frank purchased from the Boy Scouts were Mr. and Mrs. Frank and family.

The story began August 1, when Jess and Rose "disappeared" from the grounds. They returned shortly. Friday, the 13th, a process server put a summons into the hands of Jess, asking him to appear in the Arlington County courthouse August 15, which was yesterday, and answer the charge of stealing $97 from Frank.

Now this was a serious matter, said Frank.

"But I went into court yesterday and told the judge that we like to settle out of court," Frank said

"We call the king. He know what to say. So the judge he nolle prossed the case."

"Who is the king?" the reporter asked.

"Nobody knows who is the king; he comes and goes," Frank explained.

Just about that time someone sauntered into the tent. It was Alfred Riley, father of Jess.

"Sure, we de besta friends," agreed both fathers.

"We both American citizens and nothing's the trouble. Soon we find de solution to the case. When the king, he comes."

"And say, young fella, you wanta come here for a wedding pretty soon, eh?" Frank said.

Pictures of Rose and Jess?

"Nope, we not settled the case," Frank opined. "We don't have no pictures to take, not yet. Wait for wedding, you'll get pictures then, eh, Alfred?"

"Everything be all right soon, I hope," explained Frank, "but we wait for the king. He settle always."

New Fidelity Setup Topic of Meetings

Representative Vincent L. Palmisano (Democrat), Maryland, chairman of the House District Committee, yesterday requested John H. Fahey, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, to inform him of the status of reorganization plans for the Fidelity Building and Loan Association.

Mrs. Mark C. Bullis, representing a group of depositors of the closed institution, conferred yesterday with Palmisano.

Progress of the reorganization will be discussed today at a meeting of representatives of depositors, the Comptroller of the Currency and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. Another meeting, to attempt to settle the differences that have heretofore delayed the reorganization, is scheduled Thursday.

Senate Certain To Seat Black In Fight Today

Battle Flares Again.

"If the Senator is referring to me, as usual he is 100 per cent wrong," Burke shot back, and the battle of personalities was on. It flared again just before the meeting broke up, when Burke asked if it was "necessary to get permission from the Senator from Illinois," before expressing his views in the Senate.

Meanwhile, the Senate prepared to consider Black's nomination beginning at 11 a. m. today. There will be several opposition speeches, with Burke and Copeland probably taking the lead, but even the most optimistic opponents voiced little doubt as to the final outcome. A maximum of 20 to 25 votes was the highest they expected to muster.

Republicans yesterday got off to a 24-hour start, with three speeches opposing Black's confirmation. Mainly, they stressed the constitutional arguments against Black—whether the Senate had not increased the emoluments of Supreme Court office in the Sumners retirement act—whether it had not actually created a new office. Under the Constitution no Senator can occupy an office he helped to create or whose emoluments he helped to increase.

Committee Criticized.

These points were raised and debated by Senators Wallace H. White, jr., of Maine, and Frederick Steiwer, of Oregon. They were parried by Senators Tom Connally, of Texas; Sherman Minton, of Indiana, and Theodore F. Green, of Rhode Island (Democrats), rising in Black's defense.

Then Senator H. Styles Bridges, New Hampshire Republican, criticized the Judiciary Committee for not giving the public a chance to be heard on the Black nomination. Bridges said if the committee would reopen hearings, he would present the names of several persons who should be subpenaed to testify.

"We are not considering Senator Black as a United States Senator but as a nominee to the highest judicial tribunal in the Nation," said Bridges. "His public record, his public acts are a matter of interest and the public has the right to be heard."

Legal Angle Stressed.

Bridges said representatives of bar associations and others should be heard, and Majority Leader Barkley replied they "just want to come down here and talk ad nauseam." Barkley said if Bridges had any information to present, he should give it to the Senate.

When Bridges answered he wanted "to be fair" with Black, Barkley returned: "The Senator is not willing to reflect on Senator Black, but he would furnish the committee with the names of persons who would be willing."

"That is an unfair statement," Bridges replied.

Earlier Burke had said off the floor that two men in Washington, one a Government official, might have information on the Klan issue.

White, in his speech, contended the statutory privilege of retiring from the court voted by Congress was an increase in emolument, and Black, as a member of the Senate, came under that constitutional ban. He also supported the point originally made by Senator William E. Borah, Idaho Republican, that no court vacancy existed, and any appointment at this time actually would be to a new office.

Recall Held Possible.

Steiwer argued that Retired Justice Van Devanter "remains a justice, and may be called in for service."

Connally replied it was not contemplated in the Sumners retirement act that a retired justice would return to the Supreme Court, but he could be called "for work in the circuit courts."

But Steiwer insisted Van Devanter, "if willing," could be called on to perform all of the duties of a Supreme Court justice, and at least he could perform part of his former duties.

"Suppose," asked Senator Minton (Democrat), Indiana, "Mr. Hughes retired and Justice Stone were made Chief Justice, and then the President named Senator Black. How many Chief Justices would we have?"

Various Arguments Offered.

"I can't answer that," said Steiwer.

"If the President appointed Senator Black in such circumstances as I have outlined, would not Senator Black have to take the vacancy created by the moving up of Justice Stone?" asked Minton.

"I would think so," said Steiwer.

Senator Green (Democrat), of Rhode Island, argued that if no vacancy exists on the court, there would still be no vacancy if five justices retired. In that circumstances, Green said, if five justices retired the President could appoint five now and five more when retired Justices died.

"Would the same objection have been raised had Senator Robinson been appointed?" asked Green.

"Condition" Created.

"With my present understanding of the situation, I could not have voted for Senator Robinson or, for that matter, for my own colleague," Steiwer replied.

Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, said Steiwer was arguing that after Black's confirmation the court would consist of eight associate justices, one inactive associate justice and a Chief Justice. Hatch said it was very clear to him it was not the intent of Congress to so increase the court, after the extensive debate on the court plan.

Connally contended it was the "voluntary" act of Van Devanter in retiring that created the vacancy.

"If Justice Van Devanter hadn't retired would a new office have been created?" he asked. "Can it be said that Congress and Senator Black's appointment have created a new office?"

Steiwer replied that the retirement act did not "immediately" create a new office, "but it created a condition which resulted in an appointment to a new office."

Klan Protest Attacked.

During Bridges' plea for public hearings, Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, said bar association officials who might testify would not have as accurate an estimate of Black's qualifications as the 20 members of the Senate who had served throughout his Senate term. Senator Homer T. Bone (Democrat), Washington, suggested the bar associations might oppose Black because he favored child labor and utilities legislation.

Senator Minton submitted a letter from Jacob Weiss, president of the Indianapolis Zionist district, and active "in all Jewish undertakings," criticizing those who raised the Klan issue against Black. Weiss said they were employing the Klan's own methods and are "not friends of the Jewish people."

Senators voting in committee yesterday to approve the Black nomination were Ashurst, Neely, McCarran, Van Nuys, Logan, Dieterich, McGill, Hatch, Pittman, Connally, O'Mahoney, Hughes and Borah—13.

To Get G. O. P. Backing.

Committeemen voting against confirmation were King, Burke, Austin and Steiwer—4.

McCarran earlier voted with the four opponents for public hearings, then switched on the confirmation vote. O'Mahoney was not recorded on the vote for public hearings.

Borah, who voted to confirm, reserved the right to take any stand he chooses on the Senate floor. Although Borah was the first to raise the question of a constitutional barrier, he favors Black on personal grounds, and might vote in the Senate for confirmation. Other Progressive Republicans were split. Senator Johnson, of California, was expected to oppose Black, but it was said Nye and Frazier, of North Dakota, might vote to confirm.

All but One Voted for Black

Despite proposals for delay, the Senate Judiciary Committee approved the Supreme Court nomination of Senator Hugo Black. Presiding was Senator Henry F. Ashurst (seated). Standing, from left, Senators M. M. Logan, Tom Connally, William M. Dieterich, Carl A. Hatch, Frederick Van Nuys and Edward R. Burke. All but Senator Burke voted to approve the nomination.

Japan Grimly Prepares for War, but People Have No Heart for It, Uncensored Story Says

cause against the Chinese is righteous, that they have been provoked into war. Still they do not want the additional burdens of war.

There are indications the cabinet has been shocked by the extent and ferocity the struggle has assumed. The Shanghai slaughter caught the ministers by surprise. The killing of Japanese civilians and soldiers at Tungchow brought the stunning realization that Chinese cannot be enlisted under Japan's banner to fight Chinese.

Chinese enrolled as peace preservation troops by the Japanese-controlled East Hopei regime turned on their employers at Tungchow, east of Peiping.

This has caused grave doubts as to the loyalty of the Manchukuo army, consisting of some 100,000 subjects of that Japanese protectorate who racially are Chinese, allied by blood, tongue and culture with the nation with which Japan is at undeclared war.

The Manchukuo troops have Japanese arms and a degree of Japanese training, and a revolt against their Japanese masters would be a terrible development.

There have been serious train wrecks and other acts of violence and terrorism against the Japanese regime in Manchukuo, news of which has been suppressed rigorously.

Foreign economic experts say Japan's finances will not stand more than a three-month war because the government's only real, tangible funds consist of the equivalent of about $400,000,000 in gold. It must rely on the capacity and willingness of the people to pay more taxes and the banks and men of wealth to buy more government bonds.

Already half a billion yen (about $145,000,000) has been appropriated for the China war and Parliament probably will be convoked again next month to vote more hundreds of millions.

Many foreign businessmen expect a Japanese government debt moratorium soon, similar to that of postwar Germany. Already American and other foreign firms in Japan have great trouble in sending money out of the country.

Lindbergh Absent On Scientific Trip As Jon Becomes 5

Weald, England, Aug. 16 (AP).—Jon Lindbergh, a healthy little boy who likes to climb trees and wade in his father's pond, was 5 years old today.

He spent the day in the rambling old Kentish house where he lives with his mother and father and baby brother, Land Morrow Lindbergh. His father was away, presumably conferring with Dr. Alexis Carrel at the scientist's home on lonely St. Gildas Island off the French Britany coast.

Flooded Rivers Ravage Chile; Hundreds Routed

Concepcion, Chile, Aug. 16 (AP).—Chile's largest river, the Bio-Bio, and several others were out of their banks today. One death was reported, several hundred persons were homeless and there was great damage to crops.

The floods followed four days of torrential rains in the provinces of Cautin and Concepcion. Parts of the cities of Concepcion, San Rosendo and Santo Domingo were flooded. In the Cautin River Valley the towns of Temuco and Padre Las Casas were flooded. Four hundred were homeless at Los Angeles.

Boy Speeders Ordered To Attend Traffic Court

Chicago, Aug. 16 (AP).—Two 16-year-old boys, stopped by the law on speeding charges, were sentenced to look and listen in traffic court for the next two weeks. Judge J. M. Braude ordered the youths, John Helmer and Alfred Matuswicz, to sit behind him on the bench and hear the cases of other offenders.

House Passes Tax-Loophole Bill, 173 to 0

otherwise no legislation could be obtained at this session.

One small threat to adjournment Saturday night raised its head when 88 Democrats signed a petition started by Representative Arthur Healey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, asking for a Democratic caucus on or before Thursday on the wages-hours bill. The petition circulaters asked for the caucus in order to have a showdown, they said, on Democratic sentiment toward the Administration's last major measure, now hopelessly throttled in the House Rules Committee.

Representative Robert L. Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee and chairman of the caucus, said he probably would issue a call for the meeting for Thursday. It was understood, however, many Democrats plan not to appear at the meeting, in order to block any concerted action asking Rules Committee Democrats to quit blocking the bill.

Representative Allen T. Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts, minority dean of the House Ways and Means Committee, voted for the bill, but charged during debate that James Roosevelt, the President's son and secretary, while selling insurance in Massachusetts, "had an income very, very much larger than any young insurance man would have in the normal, regular practice of his business."

"Very Large Indeed."

"For a long time in Massachusetts," bellowed the tall, snow-haired Republican, "there have been reports current that James Roosevelt had a very large income from the sale of insurance to the officers of corporations which wished to be in the good graces of the White House.

"I had a look at his returns, and I can safely say that his income was very large indeed for a young man selling insurance.

"I tried to ask him questions, when he appeared before our committee to deny being connected with any foreign personal holding companies, but I was choked off.

"I received the same treatment when I asked about the returns of Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr."

Doughton promised the House legislation would reach the chamber early next session for revision of the entire tax structure, to complete the administration's program.

Representative Thomas A. Jenkins (Republican), of Ohio, interrupted the chairman to say:

"This is a different kind of tax bill—one that nearly every fair-minded member will have to vote for."

This seemed to sum up the Republican attitude, with the exception of Representative Hamilton Fish, jr. (Republican), of New York, who took the floor to air once more his now-familiar charges that "my distinguished constituent, the President of the United States, who called tax-dodgers such harsh names, admitted three years ago at a press conference that he had saved taxes by these loopholes."

Fish did not remain for the vote.

Death Leap

Rebels Capture Reinosa; Move On Santander

Insurgents Within 40 Miles of Goal in Northwestern Spain.

Franco's aviation and artillery duplicated today their methods in battering Bilbao's "iron ring" defenses, combining in a fierce day-long bombardment of the government's concrete Santander defenses.

Military witnesses said the rain of projectiles from Franco's massed squadrons of bombing planes alone was one of the heaviest of the civil war. Thousands of tons of explosives, they said, screeched into the government lines from the air.

Heavy artillery kept pace with the drive of three converging infantry columns and virtually matched the fury of the air attacks.

Capture of Reinosa, an important manufacturing center before the civil war, was the most significant since the northern drive picked up momentum Saturday after a lapse during the height of the summer heat.

Government soldiers pumped heavy machine-gun and rifle fire into the advancing insurgents, but had to abandon their fierce house-to-house defense of the town and flee.

A second insurgent column meanwhile advanced on Santander farther east, along the road from Burgos. A third, ahead in the coastal highlands, apparently awaited for the other two to straighten out the line.

Government reports did not dispute insurgent claims to possession of Reinosa, admitting that the whole mountainous region, watered by the Ebro River, had been the scene of one of the bloodiest battles of the war.

Defense advices said about 1,000 insurgent troops fell when government machine gunners opened a withering fire after allowing them to approach within 50 yards of their trenches.

Later the insurgents charged again behind a large number of tanks after a telling land and air bombardment of the defense lines.

Nazis Behead 2 Traitors And 1 Alleged Red Spy

Berlin, Aug. 16 (AP).—Three persons were guillotined today for espionage. They were Erich John, 24, Germann John, 25, both convicted of selling military secrets, and Wilhelm Firl, 43, charged with subversive activities on behalf of the Comintern, the Communist International, with headquarters in Moscow.

Closed-Shop Ban Appealed to N.J.'s Highest Tribunal

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 16 (AP).—A chancery court ruling outlawing closed-shop contracts was termed contrary to State and Federal constitutions and laws in an appeal to the State's highest court today.

In a petition to the court of errors and appeals, Meyer M. Semel, counsel for striking employes of the International Ticket Co. of Newark, listed 21 reasons for reversal of the ruling which labor leaders said would, if upheld, be a "death blow" to unionism.

Granting a temporary restrainer against picketing, Vice Chancellor Maj. Leon Berry held the closed shop was illegal and "the primary object of the strike is the closed shop and hence unlawful."

Federal Marshals Trail 33 Men Indicted for Huge Bootleg Liquor Racket Here

U. S. Mulcted Of $200,000 in Tax in 2 Years

Gang Shipped 1,000 Gallons Weekly; Cars Used Smoke Screens.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Deputy United States marshals were ordered last night to round up 33 men indicted as members of one of the largest illicit liquor rings uncovered in Washington since prohibition days.

As predicted in The Post two weeks ago, the District grand jury yesterday returned conspiracy indictments against the men.

It was estimated that 1,000 gallons of contraband liquor were being shipped into the District each week before local and Federal authorities stepped in. The Government, it was reported, lost approximately $200,000 in tax revenue in the gang's two years of operation.

Nearly a year ago, Federal agents discovered a huge still—reputed to have a capacity of 100,000 gallons—in the Virginia foothills near the village of Paris. From this still, it was learned, a bootleg ring was flooding Washington with untaxpaid liquor—corn whisky, rye and raw alcohol.

Other Stills Found.

Capt. George Little, chief of the Metropolitan Police vice squad, was notified of the still and several arrests followed. It took several months, however, to stem the illicit supply of spirits. Numerous other stills were found within a 100-mile area of Washington.

The rum-runners, it was disclosed, were using high-powered cars, equipped with smoke screens, to convoy liquor-laden trucks into the city. Efforts to smash the ring were marked by several wild chases and gun fire exchanges.

Once here, the bootleg products were distributed wholesale to "contact men" who conducted a thriving business. Purchasers saved approximately 50 per cent on the untaxed liquor supply.

One of the 33 indictments yesterday named George F. Burns, salesmanager for a wholesale grocery store here. According to Internal Revenue agents, he sold 46,000 pounds of sugar to the distillers.

Used Virginia Base.

Indicted as ringleader of the outfit was Alton B. Cissell, one-armed bootleg czar of the prohibition era. His indicted henchmen included James Allen McEaddy, colored filling-station operator; Henry Johnson, known as "Haile Selassie," and William B. Chase, alias "Smoke Screen Billy."

The gang, it was reported, conducted their wholesale business from a country store in nearby Virginia. The liquor was transported from stills to storehouse and finally to Washington distributors.

Yesterday's indictments were the greatest since 1934, when a ring was found to be supplying untaxed liquor to buyers during the first year of repeal. A total of 34 persons were named in that inquiry.

Accused of conspiring to violate revenue laws, members of the ring, if convicted, face maximum penalties of four months to two years in prison.

According to Assistant United States Attorney Roger Robb, who will handle prosecutions of the indicted men, it will probably take two weeks to apprehend the defendants for arraignment.

Warrants for the accused ring members have been issued by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage and several of those indicted have already been arrested and released on bonds.

A split in the ranks divided the ring early in 1936 and activities were abandoned soon afterward, officials said. Both Washington and Front Royal, Va., merchants unwittingly contributed to the gang's operations by selling supplies for the several stills, which were located near Paris, Middleburg, Delaplane and Brandywine.

Other conspiracy indictments named:

Tom C. Young, alias Tommie, alias Mr. Gillum; Channing Strother, alias Pinky; Melvin Sparrough, alias Mel; Aldridge H. Sutphin, Hampton Bailey, alias Ham; Manuel Bailey, alias Windy Rollins; William O. Turner, alias Blue; Walter Bailey, Raphael F. Bush, Samuel Lucas, Norman Sparrough, alias Noonie; George Richie, Clinton Eugene Colvin, Richard Adams, alias Dick; Frank Posey, Carl Dixon, alias George Miller; John James Hawkins, alias Hawk, alias John Hopkins; Walter A. Hopkins, alias Hop, alias James Goins; Hasker Jones, alias Joe Jones; Carroll Thomas, Andrew J. Standfield, alias Andrew Johnson, alias Cokey; William F. Smith, alias Hoggie; Louis W. Wright, alias Cocky; James Miles, jr., alias Red Mike; John Hiter, James Hutchinson, James Jackson, Wallace Ligon.

Park Guard Inspector Dies After Writing Resignation

Maj. Wright Survives But 12 Hours After Notifying Department Head of Plans to Leave Federal Service.

Twelve hours before he died of a heart attack at his home, 1653 Hobart street northwest, Guard Inspector William Wright, of the National Park Service, sat down at his desk to write his resignation.

This was disclosed yesterday when coworkers in the Branch of Buildings Management found the paper when they reported for work. It had been dated in advance, August 16. Mr. Wright died Saturday night.

A letter, typed by Mr. Wright, accompanied the resignation. It was addressed to Charles A. Peters, jr., assistant director, Branch of Buildings Management.

"In tendering my resignation from the guard force, effective August 31, 1937, I am only following out a policy adopted by me on my first being appointed on the force," he wrote.

"That is to say, if at any time I found I was unable to properly perform the duties of my office, I would not ask for retirement but would resign. I have now reached a point where it would not be in my mind justice to the office to try to longer remain and only half way perform my duty. It may be that after several months, I will have regained my previous good health, but with my age I feel that it is expecting a great deal of nature to bring me back to that point after what I have gone through.

"In tendering this resignation, I wish to thank all officials of the office under whom I have worked for their uniform kindness and justice to me at all times, and I assure you that it is with regret that I have had to come to this conclusion, for I like to work, but, as stated before, I do not feel that it would be justice to the office to continue in my present poor physical condition."

Children Will Get Mrs. Brown's Estate

The three children of Mrs. Bertha Bliss Brown, 2202 Kalorama road northwest, who died last month at Spring Lake, N. J., were named principal beneficiaries of her $190,005 estate, it was shown in District Court yesterday when a petition for the probate of her will was filed. The children are Katherine Agnes Brown, Clarence G. Brown and D. E. Brown, jr., all of the District.

Real estate valued at $40,005 is to be divided equally among the children, together with the stock Mrs. Brown owned in the Alonzo O. Bliss Medical Co. Bonds in the same company are to be held in trust for the children, and the income from Mrs. Brown's mother's estate is to go to the daughter.

Arthur L. Bliss and Marcia Bliss, brother and sister of Mrs. Brown, were named executors. They were represented by Bruce Baird, attorney.

Toward Fascism In Japan.

Not all of the momentous developments in the Sino-Japanese contest are on the battle lines. Significant shifts are also taking place at Tokyo. The Japanese government has decided to deal with the situation in China on a sustained war basis. To enhance its efficiency in that undertaking it is applying measures that may lead Japan definitely over the line into Fascism.

The Japanese government has always been somewhat under the domination of the military services. Democracy has functioned only to a limited extent. With the organization of Prince Konoe's government, following the recent general election, there was some hope that an appreciable trend toward more popular government would set in. Perhaps that might have been the case, except for the fact that the military has once more renewed its conquest of China.

War always means emergency decrees and centralization of power. In this case, however, the minister of finance in Tokyo appears to have gone far beyond the normal mobilization of wealth and man power for the support of a powerful army. Plans have been laid for the government to assume wide authority over foreign trade, capital, investments and the routine production and consumption of goods. Vital industries will be taken over by the government, if necessary, without waiting for the Diet to act when it reconvenes next month.

These measures are, of course, a direct step to Fascism. It is true, that Tokyo is dealing with an emergency—but it is an emergency of that government's own making. Authoritarian rule usually grows out of a desperate situation which induces the government to assume autocratic powers. Then it is usually found inconvenient or "dangerous" to relinquish those powers. So a dictatorship becomes established by the simple process of surrendering democratic principles to meet supposed crises.

Countries with strong traditions of self-government are frequently able to throw off drastic control measures invoked under unusual conditions. But Japan is not of this category. There is real danger that the authoritarian measures now in the course of adoption there will become permanent. Indeed, the militaristic elements controlling Japan may have been aiming at a greater concentration of power at home, as well as an extension of their hegemony on the continent of Asia, when they brutally renewed their aggression against China.

A Modernized Juvenile Court.

After 31 years, a modernized Juvenile Court is about to be established in the District. Only a few minor differences between the Senate and House remain to be ironed out in conference before the long fight will have been won.

Since 1906, when the law establishing Washington's court for minors was enacted, attitudes toward erring children have changed considerably. Senator Copeland well summarized these changes when he said, in reporting the bill, that the aim of society today is "protection and welfare rather than punishment and retribution" for delinquents. No longer are they regarded as mere miniature criminals. Yet District authorities have been technically bound to regard them as such because of the outdated local law.

The new law, as proposed and virtually approved, will permit consideration of the social influences which generally lie behind a youth's waywardness. For example, the court will be able to deal with adults contributing to a minor's guilt. And more than readjusting the circumstances of a child's life, the new law will minimize the stigma which today usually follows a minor's appearance in court. Jury trials in juvenile cases will be waived unless specifically requested. Hearings will be conducted in private and records always closely guarded.

For these belated improvements credit must be widely shared. The Children's Bureau and the National Probation Association determined the pattern after which the new law was modeled. The District Committees of both House and Senate patiently and intelligently amended the bill to meet all reasonable objections. Finally, the Capital is indebted to several local organizations and individuals who for years have been urging the reform. Perhaps chief among these is the League of Women Voters which once again has demonstrated its admirable capacity for fulfilling civic responsibilities.

"Eternal Vigilance Is The Price Of Liberty"

The Senate Judiciary Committee, by a vote of 13 to 4, has approved the nomination of Hugo L. Black, as a justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. Administration leaders plan to demand immediate confirmation on the floor of the Upper House.

There have been no open hearings on the qualifications of Senator Black for this vital post. Neither the legal profession, nor any other cross-section of public opinion, has been allowed to introduce evidence on the fitness of the nominee for his proposed lifetime appointment. There has been no attempt to ascertain whether President Roosevelt's candidate meets President Roosevelt's own insistence that our courts must be presided over by "men worthy and equipped to carry out impartial justice."

In the considered opinion of The Post Senator Black is not "equipped to carry out impartial justice." He is not thus equipped either by training or by temperament. His judicial experience is limited to a period of 18 months as a police court magistrate. His temperament is that of a prosecutor and not that of a judge.

This fact Senator Black has demonstrated time and again. The outstanding instance, and that which should be recalled before it is too late, was his conduct as chairman of the Senate lobby-investigating committee.

The wholesale subpena tactics which he then employed, in a fishing expedition to obtain incriminating evidence, were a gross violation of the fourth amendment. They were defined as "without authority of law" by Justice Wheat's order restraining a telegraph company from turning private messages over to the Black committee. Less than a year and a half later we find the ways greased for sliding this judicially rebuked Senator into the supreme judicial body of the land.

Hugo L. Black has always shown an admirable sympathy for the oppressed and underprivileged. So have Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini. The matter at issue is not the Senator's social and economic viewpoint, which seems to be all that some self-styled liberals can see at the moment. The one vital point is the regard which the nominee may be expected to have for that fundamental charter which as a Supreme Court justice he would help to interpret, and on which the liberties of the American citizen in the last analysis depend.

When Senator Black violated the right of the citizen to be protected from "unreasonable search and seizure" he showed himself willing to adopt the methods of the Russian Ogpu or the German Gestapo. A vague humanitarianism, expressing itself in drafting legislation for a universal 30-hour week, is no offset to a demonstrated willingness to undermine definite constitutional safeguards. And the safeguards in question are not those surrounding property rights. They guarantee basic human rights as they have been established, cherished, and as yet upheld in this country.

Senator Black's demonstrated willingness to act "without authority of law" compels a reference to the Klan issue. It is an unsavory subject on which there is little definite information. But there is no doubt that Mr. Black owes his Senate seat, and therefore indirectly his Supreme Court nomination, at least in some degree to Klan support. There have been reports, never to our knowledge effectively denied, that he was once a member of the Klan. Senate cloakrooms have been buzzing with gossip on the subject during the past few days. It is impossible to believe that confirmation could be voted, or that Senator Black would desire confirmation, without setting these rumors definitely at rest.

The incredible characteristic of our times is the way in which people who sincerely believe themselves liberal are nevertheless willing, indeed anxious, to undermine the foundations on which a liberal philosophy must rest. The Supreme Court, for all its shortcomings, has time and again defended the humble and obscure against tyrannical oppression. It has been able to do so because the wording of the Bill of Rights is clear and explicit, and because the individual in this country is guaranteed against subordination to such outcroppings of the Fascist spirit as the Ku Klux Klan so perfectly exemplifies.

The question of the fitness of Senator Black for a Supreme Court post is not primarily a matter of his willingness to go along with the general social program of the New Deal. That is an obstacle only so far as it indicates that the Senator cares little about preserving a nice balance between Federal and State powers in our form of Government. And this, while eminently desirable to the far-sighted, is not of transcendent importance in the current issue.

What is vital in the present crisis of civilization is that all replacements on the Supreme Court shall be absolutely dependable in their determination to apply the safeguards written into the Constitution for the protection of human rights. It seems impossible that the Senate should fail to hear evidence on this point, and to satisfy itself completely, even in the case of a Senator, if the nominee's reliability in the issue is in any respect questionable.

In the narrow political sense President Roosevelt has been clever in making this nomination. He has selected a man who, simply because he is a Senator, may be expected to receive almost automatic confirmation. He has selected a Senator whose loyalty to the New Deal program is slavish and uncritical, and who for that very reason is certain to be strongly opposed for his present office should he run again.

Furthermore, Mr. Roosevelt has timed the nomination so that it reaches the Senate as that weary group of men, exhausted by the successful effort to prevent wholesale packing of the Supreme Court, is thinking primarily of adjournment.

But the battle, as this nomination so clearly shows, is not over. And too much is at stake to permit the casual surrender of this vital salient of democracy. The citadel of liberty which was so well defended against frontal assault must not be slowly disintegrated by such insidious sapping and mining as the Black nomination reveals. In this day and age the fight for the defense of human liberties may be a losing fight. Yet it is always a fight worth making.

Whatever the precedents may indicate, those Senators who vote to send the Black nomination back for reconsideration may be sure of the long-range gratitude of their country. Their names will be remembered in the years to come, when the implications of the present crisis are more clear, and the underlying significance of the vote now pending is apparent to all.

An Obstacle To Economy.

President Roosevelt's drive for economy appears to be bearing fruit. At his insistence, department heads have set aside $400,000,000 in reserve accounts to be kept under close scrutiny of the Budget Bureau. Apparently the President intends to withhold these funds, except as expenditures in specific cases become particularly urgent.

It is too often forgotten that one of the first notes sounded by President Roosevelt after his first inauguration was a plea for rigid economy. Almost solely through his influence, a drastic economy measure was enacted in 1933. Congress has since undermined the most constructive features of that law, and the Administration has led in the advocacy of spending policies resulting in enormous deficits every year. But the sincerity of the President's desire to economize was not seriously questioned in March, 1933, and it should not be questioned now.

Fortunately there is today a much better opportunity to bring expenditures into line with Federal revenue. Emergency outlays can be sharply curtailed, for the conditions which made such expenditures appear necessary are being steadily ameliorated. If the President holds rigidly to the policy he has adopted in theory, a reversal of the upward trend of the national debt should not be long in coming.

It becomes more and more obvious, however, that one type of expenditure will have to be curtailed if a balance is to be approached in the near future. Since July 1 the Treasury has spent approximately $200,000,000 for gold which it does not want and which must be "sterilized" to avoid inflationary effects. That outlay represents roughly two-thirds of the Federal deficit incurred during the same period.

Up to August 13 the Treasury had spent a total of $1,277,846,040 for gold that goes into official hoarding, much of it shipped in feverishly by foreign producers anxious to take advantage of our guaranteed price. Since the President seems to have convinced department heads that substantial savings must be effected, he might well turn his attention to the gold dilemma.

Tin Pan Alley Traffic Rules.

To swing a hi de ho into "Dear Old Golden Rule Days" makes for a combination which will undoubtedly cause die-hard sentimentalists to moan. But it is the logical offspring of a proposed marriage between "jazz" and the time-honored songs of childhood. Such a union is not far off if teachers everywhere respond to its principles as enthusiastically as they did at Columbia University last week when addressed on the subject by Irving Caesar from Tin Pan Alley.

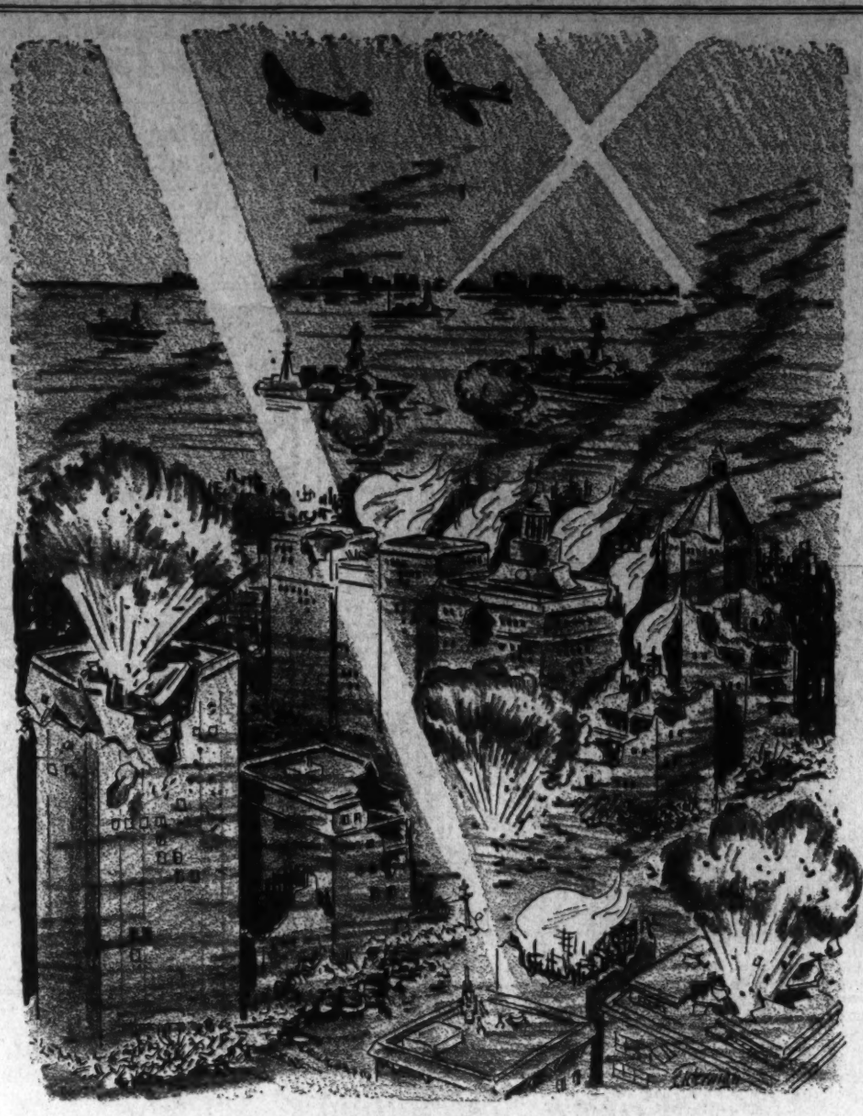
Mr. Caesar, who composed "Just a Gigolo" and "Tea for Two" has an idea which he feels will put "swing" into safety and vice versa. Tiny tots may not understand off beat time or the rudiments of caution, but this Broadway composer hopes to familiarize them with both by their adaptation to childish lyrics. For instance, "Good Morning, Dear Teacher" will be replaced by a syncopated safety song and "Happy Birthday to You" by a hot number anent a silly goof who plays recklessly on a roof. When Mr. Caesar sings of a ball it has nothing in common with the traditional one of Darktown Strutter fame, but is about the ball which Willy throws into dangerous traffic.

Mr. Caesar bases his theory on the argument that children are becoming more sophisticated and prefer their advice couched in the language of the times. No more sugar-coated tunes; no more sissy songs. This may sound harsh to Mom and it may seem silly to Dad. But if it takes lyrics to save lives, then we say more power to them with a hey nonny nonny and a hot cha cha.

A man at Hartford, Conn., was arrested for tearing up money and throwing it into the street. It's easy to see that he doesn't keep up with the trend of the times. The place to throw money, these days, is in a rat hole.

It seems that no matter where shooting breaks out on this globe, there's invariably a crowd of Americans present to do a lot of dangerous innocent bystanding.

Man is undeniably a queer creature. No matter how many years he has lived, he is invariably astonished when it gets hot in the summer.



It's Almost Beginning To Look Like A War.

Picketing Embassies.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We regret that The Post in its editorial of August 4 supported the bill against the picketing of foreign embassies which passed the Senate on August 10. This bill resembles the measures taken in Fascist countries for the repression of civil liberties. It is unconstitutional, a violation of our Bill of Rights, which states that Congress shall pass no law restricting freedom of speech or assembly.

Your contention that "the privilege of free speech and free assembly assured us under the Constitution does not legalize license" can, and would, be interpreted to mean that any criticism objected to by any government in office would be construed as license. Free speech means free speech. Any attempt to interpret it otherwise has the effect of destroying it. Diplomatic offices may, as you say, be on foreign soil, but the sidewalks in front of them are not, and democratic Americans who cherish the tradition and spirit of liberty continue to assert their right to use public places for the exercise of their constitutional privileges.

Secretary Hull states that he wants this bill passed because the exercise of these rights embarrasses him. It is the German and Italian embassies which ought to be embarrassed. Original pressure for this restrictive measure came from those Fascist embassies who wish to see the repressions they practice at home transplanted to this country.

By a coincidence your editorial on picketing is followed by one denouncing Japan for her invasion of China. That is exactly what picketing of foreign embassies does. It denounces in an effective and conspicuous way those governments which by their brutal invasion of defenseless and peaceful states, such as Ethiopia, Spain and China, show themselves the enemies of civilization.

The Joint Committee on Civil Rights strongly protests against this bill. We urge its defeat to help preserve democracy and freedom in the United States.

Laws And Traffic.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a country gone motor berserk and doomed to remain that way while the oil supply holds its present pace, Washington has to expect its share of horn hysteria and quick annihilation.

We are much intrigued, but little convinced by the latest effort of traffic powers to bring Washington drivers back to civilization. To declare open season on the wild life that rampages the streets unmolested and unrestricted in the battle to the death against its own kind—and the helpless pedestrian.

The situation has grown so hopeless some gesture has to be made, however futile. Court and jury action in several standout cases proves that no reform is possible here—unless present leniency and coddling of killers and would-bes are changed.

Fine as the local splurge is, consideration of traffic on a national scale by Congress is long overdue, with the basic killers, the manufacturers, called into offer something besides alibis and bunk about great power in small cars, handled by halfwits. Take away enough permits permanently and you'd soon have the speed and profit worshiping motor magnates behind such a move—earnestly and not hyprocritically.

Laws are the basis of reform (which goes for the horn-blowing curse too); restriction must follow; then you have the basis for education. Appeal to decency becomes possible, and results; witness Milwaukee, Providence and New England cities.

Since more cops are essential to bring about even the start of permanent reform, it is suggested that economies resulting from collecting District taxes once annually instead of twice be bestowed upon such a purpose. G. A. FARSON.
Washington, Aug. 12.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That the number of policemen covering beats in the metropolitan area is woefully inadequate has been indirectly responsible for so many traffic accidents. One can drive for miles in the District without ever seeing an officer; no wonder one of your correspondents states, "Nine out of ten drivers get going before the red light changes to green."

It's not fear of maiming or even killing pedestrians, but fear of the law that ought to be pounded into traffic violators. FIDES.

Capt. Hazard's Shark.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I rise in defense of Capt. Noah Hazard and his shark story which was in The Post of August 9. I am to blame that Capt. Hazard could not produce the shark after Wednesday evening. At that time I became the owner of the shark, and with the aid of the rest of our fishing party we loaded the shark on an auto and hauled it to a cottage on the Severn River.

It took six men to pick the shark up and load it, and although I tried to remove some of its teeth with a pair of auto pliers, the best I could do was to break them off. This shark had two rows of teeth on the bottom jaw bone, the outer row could be moved with the fingers but the rear row were solid. The upper teeth consisted of one row of teeth and all the teeth were needle sharp.

Nomination Of Senator Black.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It lessens the respect and undermines the dignity which most decent, intelligent Americans hold for our form of government to see such a man as Hugo L. Black elevated to the Nation's highest judicial tribunal. Perhaps it remained for President Roosevelt, in the bitter beginnings of his political and personal descendancy, to consummate such a weird anticlimax.

It is asking too much of a bewildered Senate to refuse to confirm this palpably unfit nomination. By the same token, it is unreasonable to expect Senator Black to forego his New Deal complex to the extent of admitting his inferiority to sit in the seats occupied by Marshall, Taney, Story, Holmes and Hughes.

J. L. KENNY.
Washington, Aug. 12.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There may be differences of opinion as to whether or not the extreme radicalism of Senator Hugo Black renders desirable his appointment as a Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, yet on one particular feature of his rather militant record in the Senate, it seems to me that there should be universal opinion to the effect that he has shown himself wholly unfit for service in the Supreme Court.

I refer to his chairmanship over a year ago of what was known as the "Black Inquisition," also sometimes styled "The American Cheka." It was a committee of the Senate which in its fanatical zeal to secure all kinds of information on critics of the New Deal with a view to their political persecution, secretly confiscated and snooped into many thousands of telegrams forced from the files of the telegraph companies, and including in at least one instance telegrams passing between the publisher of a newspaper and a member of his editorial staff. Refreshing my own memory about this matter, I looked up a letter I had written to your paper in March, 1936, as follows:

Dr. Hugh S. Magill, president of the American Federation of Investors, has issued a booklet, "From Democracy to Dictatorship," in which he asks the question, "Is there in our country today an American Cheka?" He cites in reply to his own question the almost unbelievable facts about the Black inquisition committee of the Senate, which, "drunk with power, would harass, annoy and intimidate any citizen who would influence public sentiment in opposition to New Deal schemes."

"Since Dr. Magill's booklet came off the presses there have been further revelations of the sinister workings of Black's infamous Cheka or American OGPU. In brazen violation of the fourth amendment to the Constitution that the "right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated," some 14,000,000 private telegrams have been seized and pawed over by Paul Prys and Peeping Toms. Even messages between husbands and wives have not been sacred from our Cheka snoopers. The great idea is to fish and fish until perchance you catch a fish, and to intimidate and terrorize all anti-New Dealers, and perhaps if they cannot find something in your own record or your correspondent's, to find something that will lead somewhere to someone more easy to hook and put in the Black frying pan.

Such Black doings show that tyrannic despotism can happen here—even in our alleged land of the free and home of the brave, I have no doubt that unless the Senate checks its freedom-choking Cheka that the next step will be to open letters of citizens as they pass through the postoffice, tap their telephone wires, etc.

Senator Black's conduct in this affair of the mass seizure of telegrams was not only in violation of private and personal human rights and of the Constitution, which, if he is a competent lawyer, he should have been familiar with. He ought at the time to have been expelled from the Senate. But instead his disgraceful role as an imitator of what is done in Russia by commissars of the Cheka seems now to be rewarded by his elevation to the Supreme Court of the United States.

HENRY D. BAKER.
Durham, N. C., Aug. 12.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial of August 13, attacking the qualifications of Senator Black for a place on the Supreme Court, you say that it is difficult to recall a nomination which combined such lack of qualifications on the one hand with such extreme partisanship on the other.

You appear to overlook completely the case of Justice Sutherland. That venerable jurist, it will be recalled, was appointed to the Supreme Bench by President Harding. His qualifications, so far as is known, were:

(1) That he twice represented Utah in the Senate, where he was dependably Republican at all times, but from which he was dislodged after his constituents had an opportunity to become fully acquainted with him.

(2) That he had been general handy man in the harmonious Harding political household.

(3) That he had a beard and looked scholarly.

It cannot be denied that Senator Black's qualifications, like those of the justice from Utah, have a decidedly political aspect. He, like Sutherland, is a dependable party man. But the Senator from Alabama has been a party man in the face of bitter opposition and grave political danger. Although up for re-election in the near future, he has steadfastly continued his fight for social reform on all fronts. In view of the hidebound conservatism of the rural South, coupled with the furious anti-New Deal campaign being waged by Birmingham industrialists, this course can hardly be called the line of least resistance. J. M. M., Jr.

[This correspondent conveniently forgets that Mr. Sutherland not merely held the degree of doctor of laws from three great universities before his appointment, but also was president of the American Bar Association in 1916-17. He was not overlooked by The Post in our statement that the Black nomination was unique.—Editor.]

Black Memory.

THE curious thing is that the black memory doesn't belong to me at all. But even now, years after the hanging of Jesse Ruffin and Massie Hill, I have frequently to convince myself that I wasn't present when their dark bodies went through the trap in a Virginia county jail. People are more careful now of how they talk around children.

* * *

The word went out on a July morning that an old storekeeper, John Grubb by name, had been murdered during the night and his store burned down on his body.

Then, one night, in a Virginia town about 100 miles away, a giant colored man who had been arrested for vagrancy began talking in his sleep. The words "fire" and "murder" were in the crazy quilt of his talk and it was overheard by a cellmate. The cellmate is not here to testify, but it may be presumed that he was not without motive when he made the disclosure to the jailer next morning.

At all events, they put Massie Hill through an inquisition and heard from him the unabashed recital of the murder.

Hill involved one Jesse Ruffin. Ultimately they were tried and sentenced to death. People were hanged in Virginia then.

* * *

The jail where Hill and Ruffin were confined was made of brick and is in the center of the town. A little-used street is behind it and a fairly large lawn in the front. In the street, in those days, you could see colored women walking with baskets of clothes balanced on their heads. There were houses along there; people from the outside probably would have called them cabins. The air was always charged with subdued laughter and a soft speech that seemed secret and a little afraid. A single and monotonous guitar, pitched even lower than the laughter, was always heard there at night.

It may have been this which worked on Hill. He was a giant man, lithe as a cat and with eyes to see through the brush. It was he who became restless, and the jailer kept his eye close on him. People used to sit around the stove in the sheriff's office at night and wonder why the man paced around so, why something seemed always to be bulging to his lips only to choke away in savage gulpings. Maybe I'm wrong about it coming from the guitar and the secret laughter. But there's nothing wrong in thinking that a less phlegmatic man would have pounded the bars and cried out in God's name for the rhythm of his race to quit beating on his ears when he was about to die.

By this time there was no indignation in the town over the murder. People came to the jail to see the doomed men. They brought them things to eat. And through all this Hill kept muttering that he wanted to see someone or another from the street behind the jail. The jailor finally asked him why.

"I was goin' tell him to put his head to de bars . . . I had somethin' to tell him," said Hill. Then he blurted: "I was goin' to bite his ear off'n him."

* * *

About 200 yards from the jail was the office of the county's weekly newspaper, a mighty flail for the Democratic Party and a faithful recorder of the births and deaths of the realm. It discreetly closed its eyes when the boys from the near-by college ran afoul of minor points of the law. For its editor was a man of heart as well as sound discretion and being able to look the double face of good and bad in the eye he could pity the plight of Hill and Ruffin while lamenting their behavior. He frequently went to their cell.

Hill probably liked him. There is nothing in the evidence to show otherwise. A man may play a trick on you and still like you. Anyway . . .

The editor has told me many times what Hill said to him:

"You knows, I'se done a lot o' robbins' and I'se kept mos' all de stuffs I stole . . . I done buried a lot of stuff under de church jest outside o' Emporia . . . It's under de bricks at de bottom . . . You been good to me . . . You go dere and git it . . . You can have it, boss."

Now, the editor was skilled in all the tricks of the local politicians and these he would condemn in his public print. And it is strange why he believed in Hill.

He arrived in Emporia, near the North Carolina line, in the nighttime and awakened a friend. Together, they searched for shovels or picks and found none, then resorted to two old and rusty bayonets that must have been someone's relics. They went out to the church in a buggy. It was one of those churches that is raised off the ground on slim brick supports. They dug until morning.

Late the next afternoon, Hill told the editor: "I jest wanted one good laugh befo' I died."

* * *

I never heard whether they asked for spiritual consolation. But on the morning of the hanging, a group of colored men and women came to the jail and sang and prayed. The music—deep, minored—foamed and poured like Jordan's flood. Ruffin was led to a gallows in the jail and hanged without incident.

Hill walked out, laughing. He laughed as he stood on the trap. His tremendous body plunged through and the rope broke. He lay a moment on the floor, got up laughing and walked, unaided to the trap again. Again the rope broke. But then his massive courage and his life had left him.

Fair Enough

Traitors In The Camp.

MEN, I have been having a terrible time lately over a problem which just grew out of nothing.

You know I used to like to watch men demonstrate suspenders in drug store windows. Well, a few years ago a friend of mine suddenly realized that this wasn't being done any more and hadn't been done to any serious extent since about 1915. So he thought it would be funny to get up a Society for the Revival of the Demonstration of Suspenders in Drug Store Windows, and invite me to join.

He got about 200 joiners at the start—men of all religious beliefs and politics peculiarities. We paid 50 cents initiation fee and $1 a year dues, in return for which we received a funny card and the high-sign. For the high-sign, you opened your vest, put your thumbs under your galluses, run them up and down, stretched the galluses out and let them snap.

In the beginning that was all there was to it. We were supposed to vote for the national officers, but most of us didn't bother, and the original organizer and a couple of others simply elected and re-elected themselves and cnanged the constitution and by-laws to suit themselves, usually in the direction of frivolity. But the idea caught on and two years ago there were 10,000 on the rolls, scattered all over.

• • • •

ABOUT THAT TIME politics and personal ambition reared their ugly heads. A clique got into the controlling offices and called a national convention in Denver, at which it was decided to open the rolls to people who liked to watch men demonstrate exercising machines and razor strops in drug store windows, although our original membership explicitly abhorred exercising machines and razor strop demonstrations, regarding them as esthetically inferior to suspender demonstrations. Then the usurpers put through an amendment at the last minute to include people who like to watch mechanical sock darners demonstrations, fountain pen demonstrations and potato paring and slicing demonstrations.

We, the founding fathers, so to speak, regarded ourselves as the elite of those who like to watch demonstrations in drug store windows, and resented all this with a slight feeling of betrayal. But there were a lot of Communists and professional organizers at work in the outfit by now, who knew all the school arguments and radical tricks, so we were swamped.

But still we original members did not take the matter seriously until the next annual convention, which was held in Milwaukee. None of us attended, because it was too far away for most, and anyway we couldn't get any of our people elected.

• • • •

SO AT THE Milwaukee convention the Moscow crowd decided to go C. I. O., on the ground that if you elevate those who live in the valleys of society you benefit those who live on the peaks.

The national president made a speech. He was very insulting toward us founding fathers, and when one of our original number got up and denounced him for a parliamentary trickster and demagogue a big roughneck of the left wing element took a sock at our founding father and knocked him for a loop.

Well, they not only went C. I. O., despite the fact that many of us favored the A. F. of L., and thus were put on the spot, but they adopted a resolution in favor of Stalin against Trotsky, the Madrid Communists against Franco's Fascists and oysters against clams. They also adopted as a new high-sign the clinched fist.

Of course, some of us may have sympathized with Stalin over Trotsky, Madrid against Franco and oysters against clams, but even so most of us thought these matters were not properly the business of our society. Nevertheless, our A. F. of L. sympathizers found themselves committed to an organization which they hated, our Catholics were delivered to the church burners and priest-killers of Spain, and our oyster lovers were placed in the clam column against their wills.

• • • •

THEN THEY RAISED the dues $200 a year, instituted a series of fines and pledged themselves to throw the full strength of the C. I. O. into the picket line around any office, plant or other business premises employing anyone who might resign from our society.

Personally, I wouldn't mind, except that I hate oysters and love clams, and will be damned if any bunch of dirty Communists and demagogues is going to make me hate clams and love oysters. I would join that Fascist Johnstown citizens thing in a minute, except that you never can tell what an organization will do after you are in. They might come out for tapioca.

Uneasy Europe

British Observer Reports Continued Nervousness Resulting From Civil War in Spain; Eden's Bristling Words Noted.

By Will Henderson.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

THE WAR IN SPAIN has pursued its tragic course into the second year. That bitter and embittering conflict, with its prodigal sacrifice of youth and blood and treasure and its terrible waste of material and spiritual resources, is a ghastly reproach to European statesmanship. It is no exaggeration to say that in the post-war history of Europe, in which there is more than enough of neglected opportunities and incredible follies, there is no more unworthy chapter of international duplicity and evasion than that which relates to the Spanish situation.

Had the civil war been in reality a struggle between two internal irreconcilable elements in Spain, the agony of the Spanish people would have been terrible enough. But the ordeal has become a veritable shambles because it has been given a wider and deeper significance. Persistent efforts by France and Great Britain to erect the effective safeguard of non-intervention have been thwarted and circumvented at every important stage by the Fascist powers. The result is that at the end of a year it remains in practice a cynical farce and an ill-disguised fraud.

One Side Must Yield In Important Deadlock

THE LATEST DEADLOCK represents a cleavage on a major issue and it cannot be resolved by any convenient formula. A position has been reached which will involve a definite "climb-down" by one side or the other if agreement is to be found. And as the British Foreign Secretary has made it plain more than once that his plan to save non-intervention from complete collapse stands or falls as a whole, there is a growing hope that at last the Fascist powers are going to be made to realize that they can no longer get away with the reality of intervention under the pretense of non-intervention.

What the Fascist powers want above all is speedily to obtain the recognition of belligerent rights for Franco and to shelve as long as possible the Anglo-French proposal for the withdrawal of all foreign "volunteers" from Spanish territory. The two democratic powers regard this withdrawal as of first importance, and it is unthinkable that they will abandon it, however strenuously it may be resisted by Germany and Italy.

The British and French governments are anxious that the war in Spain shall be shorn of its international character and that the Spanish people shall be allowed to settle the destiny of Spain. They would welcome, both in the interest of European peace and on broad humanitarian grounds, an opportunity to assist to bringing to an end Spain's ordeal by violence.

Mr. Eden cannot be under any illusion that the Fascist powers will undergo a sudden change of heart and will now be ready scrupulously to respect what hitherto they have consistently flouted. It is not merely that Hitler and Mussolini, by their systematic violations, have shown little but contempt for the practice of non-intervention. They have carried through a series of provocative encroachments which might in certain circumstances prove extremely dangerous to the safety of France and Britain.

Lloyd George Declares Purpose Of Fascist Powers.

THE FASCIST POWERS have gained a foothold at different strategic points on Spanish territory—in Spain itself, in the Balearic Islands and in Spanish Morocco. "They are there," Mr. Lloyd George bluntly asserted in the House of Commons, "because they want that country with its great population, its natural resources in copper and iron, and its unique strategic opportunities of fighting both France and ourselves if there is a great struggle in the future."

The interpellation by Mr. Winston Churchill regarding the placing of German and Italian heavy howitzers manned by foreign experts within range of Gibraltar and able to dominate the Straits, linked him with the war-time prime minister in a profound disquiet at the startling developments. Had such a situation come into existence under a Labor or Liberal government, it would not be difficult to imagine the furious onslaughts that would have been directed against them by the Tory party and its representatives in the present government.

But if there seems to be no limit to German and Italian indulgences that are menacing to the peace of Europe, there is evidence of a limit to the acquiescence of the British government when their activities touch British security. In the recent foreign affairs debate the Foreign Secretary gave utterance to words of great significance which constituted at once a serious protest and a public warning.

It is necessary to go back to Mr. Lloyd George's famous Mansion House speech at the time of the Agadir crisis to recall a parallel for such a clear and definite declaration—yet the statement has attracted comparatively little public notice. Having reminded the House of Commons that it had been stated many times with truth that Great Britain has no desire to interfere, no intention of interfering in, the internal affairs of Spain, he proceeded to repeat words which had been deliberately chosen and had the approval of his colleagues:

"But disinterestedness in the internal affairs of Spain must not be taken to mean disinterestedness where British interests are concerned on the land or the sea frontiers of Spain, on the trade routes that pass her by."

Britain Will Defend All Her World Interets.

HE ANNOUNCED that Britain has every intention of defending its national interest in the Mediterranean, as elsewhere in the world. There must be no mistake about that. The Mediterranean is for us a main arterial road, and we intend to maintain our place on it. We have no intention of challenging the interests of others or of seeking to turn anybody else off it or of interfering with those who geographically dwell upon it.

He extended the declaration to the Red Sea. "It has always been and it is today a major interest that no great power should establish itself on the eastern shore of the Red Sea. This applies to ourselves no less than to others."

These declarations were made to the House of Commons, but they were undoubtedly intended for more distant ears. Whether Mussolini's claim that the Mediterranean is an Italian lake was seriously advanced, and whether the Fascist activities on Spanish territory are intended, in part, to create a "nuisance" value to enable Mussolini to bargain for British recognition of Italy's conquest of Abyssinia, may be matters for conjecture. But if Mr. Eden's words have any meaning, it is that the British government is not prepared to go on shutting its eyes to Fascist acts of aggression—at any rate, not when they threaten the safety of the British Commonwealth.

It was significant, also, that Mr. Eden concluded his ample review of the international situation by indicating a greater measure of hope than was possible a year ago that the nations of Europe will yet compose their quarrels and that peace will be preserved. This view may be well founded in the sense that Hitler and Mussolini, who have led in bringing Europe back again under the dark shadows of power politics, may be less disposed now than hitherto to gamble on the pacific spirit and mood of the two western Europe democracies.

There is a growing belief, which is no doubt shared by the government, not only in this country but in important quarters abroad, that the speed and degree of British rearmament have begun to exert a steadying influence throughout Europe, that the dictators will not be unmindful of Britain's increased and steadily increasing defense resources and that consequently the danger of war has diminished somewhat. But while the Spanish conflict goes on, Europe will remain uneasy.

Lasser Predicts WPA Job March

David Lasser, president of the Workers Alliance of America, predicted yesterday that 4,000 WPA workers would gather here August 23 for a "Nation Job March" and demonstration at the Sylvan Theater. He applied yesterday for police permission to parade with a small advance contingent today. His application is expected to be approved.

The marchers, Lasser said, will urge passage of the Schwellenbach-Allen bill now pending in Congress and to ask for reinstatement of discharged WPA workers who have not secured jobs in private industry.

'ChinaHasMen'

By Felix Morley

Extracts From A Diary.

Early in 1926, Mr. Morley, then serving as Far Eastern correspondent for the Baltimore Sun, traveled from Peiping to Nankow Pass and beyond. In this mountainous territory Chinese troops are now successfully resisting Japanese efforts to break through. The following selections from a diary which Mr. Morley kept at the time reflect both the character of the country and of the men who are defending it against Japan.

THE RIDE as far as Nankow was uneventful, though I find it disagreeable, to say nothing of unsanitary, to be cooped in with a crowd of ceaselessly spitting Chinese. At Nankow, where the first spurs of the wall come into view, we transferred to an empty coal truck, occupied only by two friendly coolies, and made the rest of the trip up in this cool but relatively clean observation car. Being at the front of the train, with the huge, powerful mountain-climbing locomotive at the other end, we had a noble and unobstructed view as we puffed slowly up this well-engineered and entirely Chinese-built line.

And the view up Nankow Pass is worth attention. On either side of the dry stream bed, with occasional little villages scattered along the narrow bank, great crags and spurs of mountains come tumbling down. Even the outer spurs of the Great Wall follow their rugged outlines, linking up with the defenses around the tiniest hamlets, raising watch towers which still stand like erect sentinels on every summit. This is the route of the old caravan road to Mongolia, Turkestan and Tibet, where furs still come south on camelback while tea goes north and west, and there is the thrill of genuine romance in the sight of the well-worn cobbles emerging from the sturdy arches of the old walled villages.

• • • •

SHORTLY AFTER NOON we were at Chinglungchaio station, and ate our lunch in the bitterly cold waiting room, washed down with draughts of the hot tea always obtainable in the remotest parts of China. The stiff climb up to the wall, part of the way side by side with one of Feng's camel trains returning to Kalgan, was warming and invigorating. Breathless but thrilled at the fulfillment of a childhood desire, I stood at last on the 2,000-year-old, 1,400-mile-long monument to Chinese energy and engineering genius. They say that a Chinese bricklayer nowadays will lay no more than 200 bricks a day for foreign employers. But the story goes that the emperor, Ch'in Shih Huang, two centuries before the Christian era, worked 700,000 men so hard in rearing sections of the 20 foot by 20 foot barrier that nearly half of them died under their taskmasters. So inertia cannot always have been a characteristic of the Chinese workman.

Up over the mountains, sometimes so steeply that without the steps it would be impossible to walk along the top, this rampart runs, dropping into the Yellow Sea at Shanhaikwan, losing itself in the deserts of Turkestan in the far northwest. Brick watch towers, every hundred yards or so apart, stand as solidly as when built, not merely for observation but also to relay flash signals of alarm back to Peking at a speed more rapid than that of the fastest airplane. Climbing precipitous peaks, winding along gaunt ridges of these barren mountains, twisting and turning on its course, the wall is a memento of a heroic effort which makes creations like the Pyramids, the Panama Canal, the greatest vessels, seem puny and paltry by comparison. History records that the Great Wall did more to keep the Chinese in than the Tartars out, but that does not lessen the moral which it carries of the long tradition behind the ceaseless Chinese effort to live their own lives in their own land their own way.

OF COURSE, the train back was not on time and for an hour or so, as the sun sank behind the barren, windswept mountains, we amused ourselves sliding, and playing an improvised golf game with yuan dollars on a frozen pond beside the railroad line. At length there came a faraway whistle, and we reached the station of "Green Dragon Bridge" running as a peculiar transportation outfit pulled into it. Behind the big, armor-plated, heavily camouflaged engine, bearing the name plate of the American Locomotive Works, was a single car—a sort of caboose or brake van labeled "wreck car." A couple of Feng's soldiers lolled at the central door and a worried-looking little conductor, whose costume started well with braided cap and tailed away to carpet slippers and woolen socks pulled up over his Chinese trousers, was visible behind them. In spite of protestations from the station master that the passenger train from Kalgan would arrive "in half-hour now," we decided that this was our vehicle back to Peking. There was some sort of conference with an unseen arbiter inside which turned favorable to our determination. We climbed aboard and almost instantly were off.

It was an interesting journey. Besides the soldiers and the conductor there were two burly, dirty fellows who turned out to be trainmen and an old chap who crouched with his head in his hands, apparently in very sorry health, on a pile of sheepskins in the corner.

• • • •

AT NANKOW we added another soldier to our complement—a burly, straight-standing, attractive-looking non-commissioned officer, quite a different type to the two rather dirty and slipshod orderlies. Partly with pictures and sign language, partly with John's Chinese, we carried on quite an animated conversation with this man, the three of us sitting on a bench, myself in the middle, while the one-car train rattled and banged through the darkness, relieved rather than dissipated inside by the swinging lantern. When we asked him what gain there was to offset the ceaseless fighting in China he retorted by inquiring whether we were afraid of war. To the observation that destructive civil war between militarists is ruinous to China, regardless of the issue of personal bravery, he remarked that he had learned that the American Revolution was a form of protracted civil war, and that none accused Washington now of being a militarist who sought to ruin his country. Sooner or later, he thought, the "traitors" would come in under the Kuominchun and the nation would be united—perhaps by war with Japan. That, he refused to believe, would be disastrous for China because, though Japan has the technique, "China has the men," and is learning month by month how to defend herself adequately against the most modern military equipment.

Pronunciation

By William Lyon Phelps

Which Syllable?

The pronunciation of the English language interests me and about 40,000,000 other persons; hence I am pleased to receive the following letter from San Diego, Calif.

"I am coming to you with a little pronunciation problem. Webster has them one way (accent on the second syllable), while most people, including some of my professors, boldly say them another way (accent on the first syllable). The words: detail, address, interne, dictator, defect, spectator (I've always heard this: 'Spectator Papers'). Where should the stress go in order to be correct but not pedantic? That is, if absolute correctness and pedantry are two different things. . . ."

The noun detail and its plural bother me considerably. I have always been careful to accent the second syllable, and it hurts my ears to hear the accent on the first. Yet British dictionaries accent the first by preference while American ones accent the second. And the Englishman, Fowler (Modern English Usage), says we must accent the noun on the first, the verb on the second. I respect his authority, but in this matter I appeal from him to Dr. Samuel Johnson: his dictionary gives only the accent on the second syllable. I shall follow him.

Tom McCarthy

The Postilion

"California, Here I Come!"

ROSEVILLE, CALIF., Aug. 14.—"Get out of the way," the yardman shouted. His voice cut through the jangle of wheels and the clank of metal, like the crack of a whip. Angry, he ran the words together. They sounded more like an oath than a request to get out of the way. I jumped from the track as the yard engine rolled by.

TOM McCARTHY.

When it had passed, I raced across the yard toward the freight for Sacramento. It didn't stop in Reno. It merely slowed down. When I had put several hundred feet between myself and the siding of box cars, I turned to hop the freight. I didn't want to run the risk of being brushed off as I mounted the metal ladder.

I looked in vain for "reefers," as the slow freight rumbled by. I couldn't see any and the next best bet lay in the "gondolas." I was afraid that the string of cars was nearing its end, so I decided to grab for the first "gondola" that passed.

I had fastened my one time knapsack to my left arm, leaving both hands free. The "gondola" rolled up and I ran down the track, pacing it. I kept one eye on the string of "empties" on the siding. After a few steps, I was pacing it right and I put my right hand on one of the steel rungs. Running along beside the freight, I put my left hand on a lower rung. Then, giving a quick glance at the ominous string of "empties" down ahead, which might brush me off, I jumped for the lowest rung, and made it.

I tumbled into the "gondola" just as we neared the line of "empties." I was bound for California, and nearing "journey's end."

• • • •

THE "GONDOLA" was loaded with rock, and I made myself as comfortable as possible in the forepart, protected from the wind by the front of the car. As I sat on my knapsack, smoking a "home made" cigarette, we rumbled out of Reno, gathering speed. We passed the patch of bright sky over Center street and then the stack of a factory, giving a wavering coronet of sparks, faded behind us. That was all I could see, as the "gondola" clanked out of town.

It was a fine night, cloudless and star-filled. As the train roared upwards into the mountains, I could see behind us the flickering lights of Reno, the "biggest little city." Up above, the stars challenged all else. August is the month of falling stars and, as constant as breathing and more startling than rockets, stars raced across the skies, trailing flame behind them.

At Verdi, Nev., the train came to a halt. A head in silhouette rose above the side of the "gondola," and someone clambered in.

"Hi, 'boe,'" I said. The freight had begun to move again. The newcomer didn't answer. He crossed the car, and peered over the side. Finally, as we gained speed, he said, "I hope my 'buddy' caught it."

He was a young man, very dirty from a week's riding of freight, hailing from Chicago and heading for relatives in Oakland. He had been riding on a flat car up ahead, but there was no protection there from the wind. There were no "reefers" on the train, he said, and the "gondolas" were the best bet.

• • • •

A LITTLE LATER, the quota for our car was filled when we gained new recruits from the flat car. A heavy-set colored man climbed aboard, followed by a slightly built young Mexican. The colored man didn't have much to say. He nearly stepped on the boy from Chicago, as he got on, and I told him to watch out because the boy was trying to sleep.

"I'm not-steppin' on him," he said, and that was about all he did say. He went back to the center of the car, scooped away the gravel and rock and arranged a bed from a canvas strip and blankets which he carried, without saying anything more, he went to sleep.

The boy from Chicago came to life again, as I joined the Mexican in a cigarette. We didn't say very much, simply sat out of the wind in the forepart of the car, smoking. The Mexican was a sugar beet workman from California, returning from his first trip out of the State in nine years. He vowed that he'd never leave again.

The train roared through the Sierra's and, every once in a while, the Mexican would exclaim in a fervent, and possibly blasphemous whisper, as the shooting stars plunged across the sky. It was warm in the fore part of the gondola, and it was pleasant enough just sitting there as the train wound into the mountains, saying very little, but smoking contentedly.

Dark pines, like an army of silent lancers, rose from the hillsides. The freight rolled onwards and upwards with the rythmic crash of metal wheels against metal rails. The Mexican and the boy from Chicago both agreed that it was good to be out of the wind in the protective confines of the "gondola." They had been riding on the flat car. They said that there were at least twenty riding up there, shivering in the wind. There was even a woman up ahead on the flat car.

After a while, the boy from Chicago grew tired, and he scooped out the gravel and made a place for himself. Then he covered himself with a paper sack, such as dry cleaners use to cover a suit. I fitted myself to the gravel and pulled my raincoat over me. The Mexican went back in the car to find a place to sleep.

• • • •

"WE'RE IN God's country now," the boy from Chicago said, as we came to a stop near Auburn, Calif. We were in the hills, but they were tame, domesticated hills, covered with geometrically neat fruit orchards and dotted with farmhouses.

The boy from Chicago hopped over the side of the car and came back in a few minutes with a hatful of peaches.

"You can really live off this country," he said.

To make sure that we had enough, we all went over the side to rob the orchard.

As the train gathered speed again, the cars came alive with travelers. We rounded a turn and I could see at least 20 men standing on the flat car up ahead. The roofs of the box cars were dotted with tramps, as they clambered out into the warm, early morning sunshine.

We shared our peaches with the four Mexican workers in the "gondola" behind us and they shared with us their package of food. Mostly, it was bread with a peculiar and not-to-be-examined meat paste.

That our breakfast and that was our entrance into California.

Naming Black 'Insults' People, Copeland Says

Tammany Mayoralty Choice Charges Colleague Had Klan Backing.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 16.—Intraparty bitterness in New York City's strategically important Democratic organization grew today as Tammany's mayoralty candidate, Senator Royal S. Copeland, denounced President Roosevelt's Supreme Court appointment of Senator Hugo Black as an "insult" to the people.

Copeland, leaving no doubt that he would vote against the confirmation of Black, a faithful New Dealer, raised the Ku Klux Klan against his running mates.

"No man," he said, "who was directly or indirectly connected with the Ku Klux Klan or was the beneficiary of its sympathy or support is fit for a place in any impartial tribunal and certainly not for a place on the Supreme Court bench."

Curry Is Caller.

During the day old Tammany leaders who had been inactive for years, including John F. Curry, a former leader of the organization, called at Copeland headquarters and sat in on conferences with him and his running mates.

The situation tonight found Copeland and Tammany still further apart from the national leadership of President Roosevelt and, along with pro-Roosevelt leaders from the other four boroughs of the city, facing a powerful fusion movement seeking the re-election as mayor of F. H. LaGuardia.

Set against Tammany, an all-Manhattan organization, in the primaries was Jeremiah T. Mahoney, choice of the Democratic leaders of Brooklyn, the Bronx, Queens and Richmond, all of whom follow the leadership of Postmaster General James A. Farley.

Dewey Visits Mayor.

LaGuardia's highly publicized running mate for district attorney, Special Rackets Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey, talked the situation over with the mayor. He already had indicated he would direct most of his energies at Tammany, but publicly asserting there had been "an alliance of long standing between crime and certain elements in Tammany Hall."

Today, Copeland pooh-poohed "good government"—the LaGuardia tickets cry—as an issue. Noboy, he said, could "monopolize" such a cause, adding:

"As a candidate of course I would vote for the Ten Commandments. And of course I'd be for good government."

Mahoney resumed activity late in the day by trying to force Copeland to say whether he would bolt if he lost the Democratic nomination.

Banks Cut Federal Security Holdings

By the Associated Press.

Member banks in 101 cities continued liquidation of Government security holdings during the week ended August 11, the Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday.

The board's weekly condition statement showed the institutions effected a net $47,000,000 reduction in these holdings during the week, $33,000,000 of which was in direct and $14,000,000 in fully guaranteed Federal obligations.

Aggregate holdings on August 11 were $9,385,000,000, or $1,272,000,000 less than the total for the corresponding date a year ago.

President to Talk At Virginia Dare Fete Tomorrow

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt prepared yesterday to leave tonight for Roanoke Island, N. C., where he will speak tomorrow at the celebration commemorating the 350th anniversary of Sir Walter Raleigh's "lost colony" and the birth of Virginia Dare, first child of English parentage born in the New World. He will hurry back to Washington instead of remaining over tomorrow, because of the Chinese crisis.

A special Congressional delegation of five Representatives and five Senators has been named to escort the President to the scene and at Elizabeth City, where the party will detrain and board a cutter for Roanoke Island, the President will be joined by Postmaster General Farley.

Farley will go to Elizabeth City from Fayetteville, where he is scheduled to make an address today.

AAA Asks Slash In Wheat Acreage

By the United Press.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration yesterday told winter wheat farmers to cut their plantings to 80 per cent of the 1937 acreage if they wanted to qualify for payments under next year's soil conservation program.

While details of the 1938 program have not been fully developed, AAA officials said that a considerable reduction in wheat acreage will be necessary to prevent sharp price declines next year.

The AAA said farmers in parts of the great plains where a greater adjustment downward in wheat acreage be necessary should have a smaller percentage of their fields in soil depleting crops. Final details will have to be worked out by State and county representatives after the national policy has been perfected.

President May Judge Governors' Boat Race

By the Associated Press.

Gov. Leche of Louisiana and a New Orleans delegation invited President Roosevelt yesterday to act as presiding judge of a sailboat race between six Southern Governors on Lake Pontchartrain on Labor Day.

The Governors who will participate in the 6-mile race are Leche, White of Mississippi, Rivers of Georgia, Allred of Texas, Chandler of Kentucky and Graves of Alabama. In the Louisiana group calling at the White House with Leche were Commodore Garner Tullis, of the Southern Yacht Club; Seymour Weiss, head of the New Orleans dock board, and Herman B. Deutsch, New Orleans newspaper man. Leche remained for luncheon with the President.

NYA to Cut Student Aid By One-Third for 1938

By the Associated Press.

The National Youth Administration said yesterday the number of students receiving student aid next year would be reduced about one-third.

Last year the maximum number of needy high school, college and graduate students receiving such aid was 420,000. Approximately $33,000,000—an average of $15 to $20 a month for each student, was disbursed.

The Youth Administration's funds have been reduced for next year.

Traffic Study Here Is Urged By House Body

$3,000,000 Building Item Dropped to Await Relief of Congestion.

The House Appropriations Committee took cognizance of Washington's growing traffic congestion around the Federal triangle yesterday in recommending $4,700,000 in building construction in the District.

It eliminated a $3,000,000 estimate for a new War Department building on the ground a study should be made of the location of public buildings in relation to traffic problems.

The committee believes, the report stated, that "before any more large structures, not pressingly needed, are to be undertaken for office purposes in the District of Columbia that most careful planning should be given to their location so as to avoid congestion in an area of the city already crowded with Federal structures and presenting a continuingly increasing traffic and parking problem."

It added the question of governmental reorganization offered more complexities.

Construction items recommended were $2,325,000 for completion of an annex to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, $1,500,000 for an annex to the Government Printing Office, and $200,000 for purchase of a building at 1824 F street northwest, now occupied by governmental agencies.

The deficiency bill, the last money measure of this session, did not include the $210,000 estimate recommended Saturday by President Roosevelt for the purchase of a site for a new District National Guard armory.

As the estimate arrived too late for committee consideration, it is expected to be taken up by the Senate committee.

Strictly District items in the bill amount to $88,244.27. They include:

Repairs to the municipal fish market, to the District Training School, Laurel, Md., and to the Industrial Home School.

An increase of $39,000 for care of indigent insane at St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Kansas Power Company Plans $376,000 Issue

Proceeds will be used to construct additions to the company's properties in Kansas and to reimburse the company's treasury for previous expenditures for additions.

Roosevelt Discusses Sending Reinforcements to China to Protect U. S. Nationals

Army and Navy Chiefs Confer With President

Application of Neutrality Measure in Orient Held Problem.

By the Associated Press.

High officials are discussing the possibility of rushing reinforcements to China to protect American nationals in the undeclared war there, it was indicated last night.

This word circulated after President Roosevelt held an unheralded conference with high ranking Army and Navy officers. Present at the parley were Gen. Malin Craig, Army chief of staff, and Rear Admiral James O. Richardson, acting chief of naval operations. Secretary of State Hull and Stanley K. Hornbeck, chief of the Far Eastern Division of the State Department, also called at the Executive Mansion.

While none of them would comlyment afterward, it was hinted strongly the question of reinforcements was being discussed. Some officials were reported to have contended that to order complete evacuation of Americans now without additional protection would mean virtual abandonment of the nationals, because of the great number there and the time required for the operation.

4,000 in Shanghai.

Americans in Shanghai number 4,000, while there are many in other sections. The American Marines at Shanghai total 1,050, although the number of American soldiers, sailors and Marines in or near the whole trouble zone has been estimated at about 7,000.

Whether President Roosevelt believes reinforcements are necessary was not disclosed last night. It was said that some announcement concerning the Sino-Japanese situation might be made tomorrow, perhaps by the State Department.

There was no inkling whether this would deal with reinforcements or the question of invoking the neutrality act.

For several days there has been speculation about application of the act, which declares that when the President finds a state of war existing, he shall embargo the shipment of arms and munitions to the belligerents. He also may halt shipment of certain other goods unless the purchasers pay for them and assume the risk of transportation.

Might Offend Japan.

There have been arguments that this "cash and carry" clause might do more damage to China than to Japan. On the other hand, it has been contended by some observers, that any proclamation by Mr. Roosevelt declaring that war exists might be offensive to Japan, which has refrained from a formal declaration of war.

On Capitol Hill, Senator Pittman (Nevada), said today Mr. Roosevelt was "well within his discretionary powers" in failing to apply the act.

"There has been no declaration of war," he noted. "Japan continues to insist she is not carrying war to China, but is protecting the interests of her nationals.

"Many American citizens are in grave peril, an added complication. In view of the situation it would seem the President is amply justified in proceeding cautiously, under the discretionary powers granted him by the neutrality act."

Destroyers En Route.

Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, chief of the Asiatic Fleet, reported to the Navy Department yesterday he had ordered the destroyers Parrott and Edsall to proceed at once from Chefoo to Shanghai and the Isabel, a yacht converted into a gunboat, to go from Tsingtao to Shanghai.

Under the direction of Yarnell and Clarence E. Gauss, United States consul general, evacuation of American women and children from Shanghai has commenced.

The Marine Corps announced that a rifle detachment of 102 men and 2 officers would sail Wednesday from Manila for Shanghai.

The Federal Reserve Board, meanwhile, authorized national banks to close their branches in Shanghai if necessary.

Senator Lewis (Democrat), Illinois, criticized what he described as efforts of certain American "under officials" to direct this country's affairs in a manner that might involve the United States in the conflict.

He said influences in the Orient were assuring Great Britain that American troops now in China would be retained there to co-operate with that nation in its efforts to protect its concessions and property.

Red Cross Will Aid.

"If there be those in the Orient or at Washington professing to be American officials who are seeking to bind this Government to co-operate with England in possible military conflict for the purpose of preserving the English possessions, I must announce that such cannot be with the consent of the State Department."

Red Cross officials here received word that the Philippines Red Cross chapter at Manila is preparing to house and feed refugees.

Chinese Attack on Every Front; Air Fights Rage Over City.

attache said 400 Chinese were killed in furious fighting.

Other battles broke out on all major fronts.

A shell dropped in the international settlement jail, containing 4,000 prisoners, and killed ten Chinese prisoners and injured 70.

The Chinese were offering stubborn resistance on every front. The Japanese offensive on the Peiping-Suiyuan Railway—conceived by Tokyo as the first great campaign after the Peiping-Tientsin conquest—was stopped cold.

The Pootung waterfront fire broke out soon after the Idzumo's heavy guns loosed a broadside. The repercussion shattered windows in Sassoon House, British-owned office building housing the British consulate.

Six Japanese bombing planes were subjecting Pootung to a terrific bombardment in a systematic effort to mop up the area. Two scouting planes circled above the bombers picking out spots to be attacked and occasionally diving down to strafe Chinese positions with their machine guns.

The bombers flew in two groups of three each from Pootung Point to the area opposite the French bund, approximately half a mile from the concentration of foreign warships, dropping tons of explosives on Chinese artillery stations about half a mile east of the river bank.

Japanese reported that a savage battle was raging on a wide front in Chapei.

Ambulances clanged through the streets amid the crash of shells and rattle of machine gun and rifle fire.

Five Chinese bombers attacked the Japanese landing party headquarters in the international settlement.

The following developments were taking shape as dawn brought renewed violence in the fighting:

The Japanese cabinet in Tokyo requested the Diet (Parliament) to convene September 3 for a five-day emergency session at which measures dealing with the Sino-Japanese war will be presented.

A powerful Nanking division of the Chinese Central Army after sneaking across the Whangpoo on junks during the night, was entrenched on the muddy plains east of the city.

Japanese troops, landed under cover of a terrific artillery barrage from warships tied up in the river, massed for a battle that may decide the fate of Shanghai.

The world's great powers sped evacuation of their nationals and organized further stronger protection for those remaning in Shanghai's international settlement.

The French foreign office in Paris announced that a battalion of French troops from Indo-China was being rushed to Shanghai and that the Far East navtl squadron was ready for action "if necessary."

The Japanese Embassy at Nanking closed. Japanese consuls throughout China were being withdrawn in what was interpreted as the first step in severance of diplomatic relations with China.

Air battles were reported over Nanking, Hangchow, Shanghai proper, and on both the east and west banks of the Whangpoo River, below the city.

The general aerial operations started by the Chinese Saturday had been broadened until the air war had assumed an importance even greater than that on land.

The Japanese naval attache, in a communique, said imperial squadrons had bombarded the airport at Kashing, destroying ten Chinese planes. They shot down three additional Chinese planes in a battle near the airport.

Chinese Bomb Wharf.

Another Japanese squadron bombed the Chinese long-range artillery positions at Paoshing, on the Yangtse, northwest of Shanghai.

A fourth squadron bombed Chinese artillery and a division of the Chinese militia composed of former troops of Marshall Chang Hsueh-Liang, once dictator of Manchuria, north of Hongkow Park in the International Settlement.

Other squadrons attacked the Chinese positions in Pootung, opposite Shanghai's international bund, with bombs and machine guns.

Chinese planes bombed the Japanese landing wharf near the Japanese consulate general and caused considerable damage. H. R. Ekins, of the United Press, who was near the spot, counted, the bodies of nine Russian guards employed by the Japanese and nine Chinese after the explosion.

Two Japanese naval officers were wounded.

The number of Japanese planes in the air tended to confirm reports that a second Japanese aircraft carrier had arrived off the port.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, Nanking dictator, ordered his entire air force into the battle yesterday in an effort to "blast the Japanese out of the Shanghai area within 48 hours," but after half that time had elapsed it appeared the Chinese had a long way to go.

Japanese claimed they had shot down or destroyed more than 25 Chinese planes, while the Chinese war office in Nanking said that 26 Japanese planes, mostly bombers, had been shot down by Chinese pursuit ships while the Chinese losses were only five planes.

War in Its Ninth Day.

As Shanghai's new war entered its ninth day, the "incident," which started the night of August 9 when Lieut. Isao Saito and Seaman Yozo Saito of the Japanese navy were shot and killed by Chinese militiamen defending the Hungjo airdrome, had spread into an unprecedented conflict.

The battle front extended along a line of more than 40 miles and an entirely new sector had developed on the flat lands which form the eastern shore of the Whangpoo River north of Shanghai's international water front.

The Chinese general staff sent one of its German-trained divisions from Nanking across the Whangpoo above Shanghai proper yesterday and entrenched them in the new position. Big mortars were ferried across the river in the evening and at night a bombardment of more than a dozen Japanese warships anchored in the lower river's comparatively narrow channel was started.

China Forced To Fight, Says World Traveler

U. S. Will Face New Menace If Japan Wins, Says Mrs. Ward.

Mrs. Dorothy Lee Ward, Washington society matron and world traveler arrived yesterday from China surprised to learn Shanghai, where she spent two peaceful months, was now the scene of horror and bloodshed.

She had left there recently to return home because of a slight illness, she said.

"I must travel under a lucky star," said Mrs. Ward, "because I had no warning of impending trouble."

Until she landed aboard the U. S. S. President Coolidge, Mrs. Ward had no inkling of the danger she escaped. Throughout her Shanghai visit—the fifth in as many years—she encountered nothing that resembled renewed Sino-Japanese hostilities, she declared.

"Shanghai was totally unprepared to meet a Japanese attack," she said, "why, war was farthest from the minds of those peaceful citizens."

One of the bloodiest battles in history, Mrs. Ward predicted, will take place when the international settlement, housing thousands of American and foreign subjects, is evacuated.

"China has awakened," she declared, "it is not the peaceful China of 1932. It is a nation determined to fight for its rights and holdings rather than lose the fruits of many years of toil."

Should Japan be victorious, continued Mrs. Ward, the United States will be faced with a new menace.

For many months, as she traveled through Japan, Mrs. Ward witnessed widespread preparations for war. At every railroad station, troops were being gathered, apparently for action. But the significance of these movements failed to impress China.

Mrs. Ward plans to reopen her home at 2400 Massachusetts avenue northwest. Her China visit was spent both in Shanghai and Peking. She has been collecting art treasures.

Chiang Rewards Fliers Who Defended Nanking

Nanking, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek tonight gave all Chinese fliers who participated in the air battles over Nanking and Hangchow a promotion and a raise in pay.

The order, citing the "heroic" defense of the Chinese fliers who reportedly shot down eight Japanese planes during the skirmish, raised each aviator one peg above his former rank. Gen. Chow Ting-fang, leader of the squadron, received a bonus of 20,000 yuan ($6,000).

Gov. Hurley Assails Spanish Loyalists

Boston, Aug. 16 (AP).—Declaring Spanish government forces are "communistic reds out of sympathy with the Government of the United States," Gov. Charles F. Hurley today turned down an invitation to a reception Thursday in honor of three Boston brothers who fought with the Abraham Lincoln battalion.

Hurley declared, "I would not permit myself to associate with either an individual or a group of communistic reds who are out of sympathy with the constituted Government of the United States."

The brothers, Charles, Francis and Edward Flaherty, recently returned from Spain where they fought for the government.

AustrianMunitions Sought by Chinese

Vienna, Aug. 16 (AP).—Authoritative sources expressed belief tonight that Dr. H. H. Kung, Chinese foreign minister, may have negotiated arms purchases from Austria in a long conservation with Chancellor Kurt von Schuschnigg.

Schuschnigg and Dr. Kung met today at Salzburg at the chancellor's invitation, but issued no statement of their discussions.

No Water in 22 Years.

New York, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—Alexander Einer, 70-year-old restaurant keeper, explained in Coney Island Court today he had not touched water in 22 years and that was why he had so much wine in his cellar. He was freed on a charge of illegally keeping the wine for sale.

China May Appeal To League Council

Geneva, Aug. 16 (AP).—A September Chinese appeal to the League of Nations Council against Japanese aggression was forecast tonight in informed league quarters.

The council, with several important matters to come before it, will meet September 10 for its ninety-eighth session, three days before the annual league assembly meeting.

Chinese diplomatic sources declared they had no instructions warranting them to prepare representations. They said they were in constant touch with Nanking, however, and expected a protest would be authorized. Such a step, it was generally predicted, would be made despite Nanking's feeling of futility over league intervention since its protests against Japan's annexation of Manchuria in 1932.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Aug. 16

ALICE HUGHES.

IT IS USUALLY mistakenly believed that the theater has its being here exclusively in that fabulous and fairly foul area bounded by Forty-second and Fifty-second streets and known in criminal annals as Times Square. This is a very wide shot, for there are as many theatrical districts in our town as there are foreign districts, which means a lot.

One of the most interesting of these is the Jewish theatrical center on lower Second avenue. Its people love the stage and its people in a terribly emotional way—they sit in the famed Cafe Royal and talk show business in an arty manner until closing time. Maurice Schwartz is the reigning deity of the Jewish drama, which is extraordinarily dramatic and fizzes in a Second avenue theater like a super-seidlitz powder. But right now the avenue is in a hysterically happy state, for the pride, the joy, the best-loved Dream Girl of its musical show division has returned from two triumphant years of wandering the world. Molly Picon is home again, and Second avenue should be roped off for dancing!

Molly is a tiny, snappy-eyed little bundle of talent—an amazing mimic, a brilliant comedienne—and her local public adores her. Unfortunately for them, so does the rest of the world. She is a sensation in Budapest, and on her recent tour played six weeks in Johannesburg, and six months in South America. Last fall, loitering in the lobby of the Savoy in London, I heard an East Side voice behind a pillar. Peering around it, there was little Molly! She's a citizen of the world—but she really belongs to our jammed, noisy odoriferous Second aveune!

And now she's home again! Several thousand of her people met her boat with the most emotional welcome the Hudson has ever seen—and in September she'll open in a new musical show called "Malkele" — or "Little Molly"—on the Avenue. And that will be something to see—and hear!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—It is a well-known scientific fact that there is something about an unusually pretty blonde Junior Glamor Girl that violently attracts older men of—shall we coin a phrase and say "the world?" The latest case history is that of our lovely young tidbit called "Honey" Johnson. She has been ardently pursued, at various times, but such experienced gentlemen as Mike Farmer, former Mr. Glorja Swanson, and Mr. George Preston Marshall, noted blanchisseur and sports tycoon of Washington, and only the other day we learned that she was romancing with Dave, last of the marrying Mdivanis, and former Mr. Mae Murray. Seems sort of a shame that the nice young chaps of the town are always pushed out of the picture by more mature men of, let us say, "the world"

The most harrowing—yet finely written—book I've read in years is called "Lena," a French product and a tale of messy war in the Balkans. Powerful and horrible. Hasn't Louisa May Alcott written anything nice lately? . . . The most provocative show title for the season now looming is "Beauty." Comrade Alex Yokel, who got rich producing "Three Men on a Horse," is thinking of putting out two companies of "Beauty" at once, for here and Chicago—Irene Rich to head the Illinois troupe and Billie Burke to top ours. A couple of likely girls for any show, and I wonder if this one can live up to its titivating title?

• • • •

Last gasp from doddering old Newport—read this to father and gave him a laugh. All the snappy gents there are now wearing maroon-colored pants — a vogue started by the courtly Prince George of Russia, who manages the Newport branch of a famed Fifth avenue department store. Maroon-colored breeks! And there are still dolts who say that civilization isn't crashing around us!

I can remember when girls were content to sit and watch polo. Now the youngsters are playing it all over Long Island, and look out for flying polo-balls! The women's polo association now has 110 hard ridin' hard cussin' (maybe) members.

New Sleek Form-Fitting Dresses Require Special Foundations

Fall Silhouette Has Molded Body Lines and Small Waist of 1900 Era.

By Ethel Ehlen

The Post Fashion Editor.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—With the fall clothes adopting a corseted look and the new styles with the corslet waist being inspired by the corset, foundation garments have assumed a new importance in the fashion picture. The silhouette for fall consists of molded lines, a concave waist, high bustline, long hipline and flat diaphragm. These long, molded lines, definitely of the 1900 influence, can only be achieved by correct foundations, and with the entire wardrobe going form-fitting, there can be no ungainly bulges, thick waistlines or bulging midriffs. Everything is being done in the styling of the new foundations to give the waist as small an appearance as possible, and to give an illusion of length to the torso.

Luxurious materials such as brocaded satin, crepe and taffeta, fashioned with meticulous detail, characterize the newest one-piece foundations and girdles. Lace trimming for the entire garment as well as lace bra tops are much in evidence. Fitting in the modern manner is achieved by lastex materials combined with the brocades, bias-cut pieces and the like, instead of the 1900 manner of heavy materials and uncomfortable boning. While the silhouette is virtually the same as that of the turn of the century, the 1937 methods of corseting are synonymous with comfort. The smart garment at right with talon fastener for added convenience is an excellent example of the current foundation to set off the new fall clothes.

The majority of women prefer the one-piece foundation to the girdle and bra because it keeps the figure line unbroken and helps to promote the fluid lines so popular in the fall style scene. For wear with suits however, one may select a high-built girdle and long bra; this idea is also suggested for some of the heavier types of figures, although special one-piece garments have been designed for the not-so-slim silhouette. The newest bras, by the way, should be chosen by bust type rather than figure measurement; this insures proper fitting, and applies to silhouettes of all sizes and shapes.

There have been many seasons when clothes were created to decorate the figure. This fall however, clothes have been designed to exploit the feminine silhouette.

The new silhouette and corselet dress inspired by foundation garments.

Teachers' Co-operative Vacation Taken in Trailer Costs $150 Each

Twenty-one Canadian Girls Cover 8,500 Miles; Pool Their Resources for Food and Carry Own Cook, Driver and Manager.

TWENTY-ONE school teachers from the Alberta Province, Canada, who have been visiting in Washington have done much to solve the problem of an economical vacation that is worthwhile.

By the time they reach home August 25, they will have travelled 8,500 miles by trailer, visiting the most important points of interest in Canada and the United States. And at a cost of about $150 each.

The trailer in which they travel is 27 feet long and 8 feet wide. It is constructed like a pullman coach. There is a partition between each four seats, two of which face each other, so that four people can be comfortably seated. At night the lower seats are arranged for sleeping. During the day the upper berths are closed by latching a wooden compartment to the top of the trailer. Covering for both the upper and lower berths is inclosed in the upper berth compartment. A separate window for each lower and upper berth assures plenty of fresh air.

Have Staff Cook.

In the front part of the trailer is a cupboard kitchen that contains a four-shelf refrigerator, and a four-burner stove—oil or gas, water spigot and sink. All the meals are prepared by a staff cook. There are three other members of the staff, Mrs. Arthur Toogood, wife of the manager, who keeps a strict account of all expenses, so they can be added and shared. Arthur Toogood, manager, and the driver, John Toogood.

All the meals are prepared at the tourist camps at which the party stops. The teachers do their laundering then also.

The girls all travel in slacks, but carry one good dress apiece and two or three washable dresses to wear when they go out in the evenings or sight-seeing in the cities. They carry only a minimum amount of underclothes, which they launder at each stop.

By living in a trailer—that is, riding, eating, sleeping—these girls are able to see the most worthwhile points of interest from Alberta to Washington and Washington to Chicago.

Leaving Calgary, Canada, July 4, they journeyed to Winnipeg, Quebec, Montreal and Niagara Falls, stopping over at each place several days to visit historical and interesting points. Leaving Niagara Falls they toured leisurely through the New England States, remaining in Boston and wherever they chose for as long as they liked. They will return home by way of Pittsburgh and Chicago.

Prefer Washington.

"Washington is the most beautiful city we have seen," said brown-eyed, vivacious Christine Gerluck. "It has trees and space—and I like that—even if some people do ask me if I speak English.

"I conversed with a woman here for 10 or 15 minutes in English, and suddenly she exclaimed, 'Where is Alberta?'"

I replied, "It is one of the provinces of Canada, north of Montana."

"But do you speak English?" she queried.

New Recipes for Canning

TIME to can chicken—for next winter's salads, pies and chicken a la king.

For right now the markets are bursting with the plump two-year-old hens that give you your dollar's worth of delicious chicken.

To can boned chicken you dress the birds just as you would for cooking. Simmer whole in a covered pan with a little water until the chicken's tender enough to permit you to remove the bones easily. Cool, discard the skin and cut the meat into pieces, leaving the drumsticks and second joints intact.

Then pack into sterilized containers, leaving room for liquid. Add ½ teaspoon salt for each pint and fill with a boiling broth you've made from bones and trimmings.

Next comes the processing in the steam pressure cooker and lo! the job's done.

Then how about a sun-flavored succotash for January? Make a good buy in sweet corn and lima beans, prepare as you would for ordinary canning and combine—1-3 beans and 2-3 corn. Process in a steam pressure cooker.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

Dr. Logan Clendening.

Shaving Made Easier.

The experimental research into safe and comfortable shaving conducted by the Mellon Institute reported on these factors:

1. Relative toughness of beards. We discussed this yesterday.

2. Softening of hairs. This can be measured exactly. A weight is put on a hair and the stretch measured. A hair soaked in water sufficiently long will stretch 50 per cent of its length. This stretchability is the measure of the amount of softening it undergoes. So having a standard it can be said, definitely:

That hot water softens hair about four times as fast as cold water. Using water alone: At 120 degrees F. the hair is softened in 40 seconds; at 57 degrees it takes 150 seconds to soften it that much.

Soap is an enormous aid in softening. Soap and water at 75 degrees softens in 40 seconds. Curiously, white hair does not soften as rapidly in this combination as dark hair.

Keratin is a chemical in hair which is not soluble in water but absorbs it rapidly. It is this keratin absorption which does the softening.

3. Duration of preparation for shaving is an important factor in comfort. Three minutes of soaping and lathering was placed as the most satisfactory time.

It is best to wash the face first with ordinary soap and water to remove particles of grit which might dull the razor and to remove oil and debris.

4. The razor. Aside from sharpness the most important thing to make the razor safe and comfortable is the shaving angle—the angle of the razor on the skin. The minimum amount of injury to the skin was done when the shaving angle is about 25 degrees. But different shavers differed in this.

Safety guards were first fitted to razors in 1875, but the general use of the safety razor is of the twentieth century. It is estimated by the Mellon Institute workers that well over half the men in the United States use safety razors. This seems a low estimate, but I received a letter the other day from an old-fashioned hollow ground razor manufacturer, who said that his business was better now than ever.

Safety razor blades, according to this report, are made "from steel as good for shaving purposes as the best steel ever used for an old-style straight razor, if not better." This is contrary to all previous pronouncements on the subject. The automatic sharpening equipment of safety razor blade manufacturers produces sharper blades than any device for sharpening old blades.

Corrosion of the blade either during shaving or between shaves had very little to do with making a dull blade.

The first stroke of the razor over the beard cuts it at an angle so there is a sharp pointed piece of stubble sticking out. This is what gives the feel of not having a close shave. A dull razor is more apt to do this. A close shave can be obtained the first time over better by stretching the skin: the guard bar of a safety is supposed to do this.

Ingrowing hairs are produced by slanting wounds through the skin at the hair root. Sharp razors, contrary to expectation, produce these more readily than dull ones.

The material you scrape off your face freed from lather is about half hairs and half skin debris.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a 3-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Mother Objects to Grown Son's Staying Out Until Dawn; Should He Leave Home? He Asks.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young man 20 years old, self-supporting, living at home and going to night school. I work for the Government and pay 75 per cent of my earnings for board and room. I smoke, drink moderately, like parties, girls, etc. On week-ends I like to stay out quite late with the boys, and once in a while I do not get home until dawn or later. I spend this time at taverns or mostly just sitting and talking with friends who work all night as watchmen.

• • • •

My problem is this: My mother, who is very broadminded on most things, is trying to censor my men friends and late hours. I have only one night a week to spend as I please, and I like to make the most of it. I have the choice of dropping most of my friends or leaving home. Home means more to me than any friends but my contention is that if it is not these friends, it will be others. Please let me know what to do, as I must make a decision. Sincerely,

PUZZLED.

DEAR PUZZLED: I'm not at all sure your mother is discrediting her broad-mindness in taking a stand against your remaining out all night on an average of once a week. She would be derelict in her duty as a parent if she blithely condoned such an undesirable habit. In my opinion, no constructive purpose is served and no particularly worthwhile association developed, through habitual night-long drifting about the town.

• • • •

In making a practice, today, of staying out all hours on your one free evening, you may find later when you have more free evenings, that you have acquired the habit of never knowing when to go home, so to speak. Since you are in the market for night-owl association, it is entirely probable that if you were to give up one set of friends to please your mother, you would only take on another set equally blameworthy in her sight. And it is understandable that she should blame them—rather than you—for this out-until-dawn irregularity, if your conduct in general is orthodox.

• • • •

My advice to you is to effect a compromise, more for your own good than to please your mother. Change your hours, and you will find your association automatically changing. Make 3 o'clock at the latest the dead-line for checking in on your free evenings. The discipline will be good for you, and so will the sleep; not to mention the foresighted breaking up of a habit that is bound to lead more downhill than up.

• • • •

If you don't like my advice, or your mother's attitude, move away from home if you wish. That is your privilege, since you are entirely self-supporting. But if you decide to do so, it is fervently to be hoped that you have enough judgment and capacity for self-discipline to know how to deal wisely with your new freedom. M. H.

• • • •

Diagnostician's Opinion.

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Your letter (which, as you see, has been condensed to a skeleton outline for publication) was referred to a first-class diagnostician. His emphatic advice is that you and your fiance place yourselves in the hands of a reputable physician who specializes in the treatment of venereal disease. He has given me the name of such a man, which I will be glad to forward if you will send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Only a specialist is qualified to supply really reliable answers to all your questions.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Silk Shirts Popular In White, Soft Shades

New York (AP).—Silk shirts, once sissy stuff for the man who maintained an office and home, have returned to popular favor in white or in the soft shades of blue, tan and gray made with self collar, single pocket and single cuffs. A number of subdued patterns are also being used in silk shirts, such as pin checks, small gingham checks, end to end mottled silks, pin stripes or very fine hairline stripes.

Women Stronger Than Men But Still Lovely Predicted

Buffalo, N. Y., (AP).—Women who are stronger than men and more beautiful than ever will soon put the skids under the now-reigning "glamour girls," a beauty expert predicts.

Russell Mancuso, instructor for the Nation's pioneer WPA beauty course, offered under the adult education program, believes the rouge and lipstick era is about over."

"Women will turn their attention from wardrobe and makeup details to more worldly affairs," he said.

"They will be altogether different and superior to men in strength, with enough beauty thrown in to sway the affairs of the Nation."

Competition among women will stimulate the new type and new strength, Mancuso added.

"Gossips won't talk much longer about the shade of a woman's stockings. They'll discuss the type of vitamin pills she carries in her compact."

Newly-Wed D. C. Couple Are to Live in Manchuria

Turners to Move This Month to Dairen, But State Department Attache Declares New Post Is Remote From Present Danger Zone in China.

"Darien is just as safe as Washington," said William Turner of the State Department yesterday when asked about his new post in Manchuria. Going to any part of the world adjacent to China or Japan seems these days like looking for trobule, but friends of Mr. and Mrs. Turner need have no fears on their behalf, as Dairen is not considered in the danger zone.

Members of Capital society will have little time to become acquainted with Mrs. Turner before she sails with her husband the end of the month. The former Florence Green, she was married in June and since then she and Mr. Turner have been making their home at the Middleburg estate of Mrs. D. C. Sands, the bride's aunt. Mrs. Sands has returned from California, however, so Mr. and Mrs. Turner moved back last week to their Connecticut, avenue apartment in what used to be the Irish Legation Mrs. Turner is now in New York visiting her parents and making last minute preparations for her first foreign service post.

Mr. Turner is familiar with the Far East as he served with our Embassy at Tokyo for several years and also in the consulate at Yokohama. He has also visited Manchuria several times, but this will be Mrs. Turner's first trip to that country. Foreign service officers are usually assigned to Washington for three years at a time, and Mr. Turner's term of duty is up this month.

Perazics Lease, Occupy Home Of Mrs. Lamar

Yugoslavian Envoy and Wife Take Villa Rosa on Massachusetts Avenue.

THE SECRETARY of the Yugoslavian Legation and Mme. Perazic no sooner got back from their summer-long vacation in Europe than they started to hunt a house for the coming season, with the result that they have just leased the Villa Rosa, Mrs. William Bailey Lamar's Italian-type home on Massachusetts avenue extended.

Villa Rosa was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Harold Walker last winter, but with the first warm weather they packed up and moved to Webley, their place on the Eastern Shore of Maryland.

Mme. Perazic, who has been hoping to get a house a little distance from the heart of town and yet not too far away, decided that Villa Rose exactly matched the picture in her mind of what she wanted. So well did it match the picture that the Perazics moved in on Saturday.

Last winter they leased Alexander Kirke's house in Georgetown, so that gradually they are becoming acquainted with all the nooks and crannies of Washington, simply by house-gypsying around the town.

Mr. and Mrs. Eduardo Santos Have Visit With Sumner Welles

Colombian Legation Officials Also Entertain Incognito Callers; Mr. and Mrs. M. T. McIntyre to Vacation at Blowing Rock, N. C.

By Elizabeth Ford.

The Assistant Secretary of State, Sumner Welles, sliced time out of his week-end in the country this past Sunday to come all the way into Washington to pass a social hour with two "out-of-town" visitors who were staying incognito at the Mayflower Hotel.

They were Eduardo Santos, who is presidential timber in Colombian elections this year, and Senora de Santos. With no particular hue and cry, but with plenty of hospitality, they were feted Saturday and Sunday by officials of the Colombian Legation. The Secretary of the Legation, Alberto Vargas Narino, aiding and abetting them in their desire to escape various pomp and sundry circumstances, invited them out to a quiet dinner Saturday night at his home, where other guests were his brother and sister-in-law, Guillerno Vargas Narino and Senora de Narino.

On Sunday the Santos had luncheon with members of the legation at Olney Inn, dashed back 20 miles to chat with Mr. Welles, and then slipped aboard a 7 o'clock train to New York before anyone else had a chance to look at them. They will be in New York for three weeks and then top off their stay in this country by a backward glance at the Statue of Liberty as the Normandie noses past Bedloes Island on another sprint to Europe.

It should be the Marvellous T. McIntyres. With all this hot weather hemming and hawing that's going in one ear and out the other, the Secretary to the President and Mrs. McIntyre are pleasantly unperturbed.

In fact they are not planning to give Washington the run-out until after Labor Day. Then they will leave—just the two of them—for a couple of weeks at Blowing Rock, N. C. They generally buy their tickets for Asheville, but this time they decided to follow the map somewhere else.

Their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Hayes Warren, still have no vacation ventures lined up.

Visiting with the Marvin T. McIntyres since the first of August has been Maj. A. D. Bruce, of the Army's general staff, who will be stationed in Washington for the next four years. Mrs. Bruce, who is now at Nimrod Hall, Va., with their three children, Davis, Logan and Linnell, will join him here the first of September.

Sails for Europe.

Miss Anne Meriam, of Kensington, Md., sailed on Saturday from New York aboard the S. S. Champlain. It is her plan to spend her vacation abroad visiting friends and relatives who have their homes in France, Belgium, Switzerland and Holland. She will return to Washington in early October.

Legion Auxiliary Shows Largest Membership Gain

District of Columbia Convention Hears Reports of National and Local Increases; Mrs. Hahn, President, Speaks

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The largest gain in membership in the history fo the American Legion Auxiliary was reported last night at the opening session of the department of the District of Columbia convention by Mrs. Oscar W. Hahn, national president, who was a guest of honor and chief speaker of the evening. The convention, continuing today, is being held in the Red Cross Chapter House. Mrs. Hahn, who arrived by plane at 7 o'clock, was met by Mrs. Martin Dyer, distinguished guest chairman for the department.

Mrs. Mary K. Killeen, affectionately called "mother" by members of the organization, presided as president of the District of Columbia Department and reported a record membership gain in the local units matching that of the national organization. The national organization has jumped from 425,000 to 437,000 during the past year, and the department has increased from 800 to 1,500, exceeding its quota by more than 200.

Mrs. Hahn emphasized the broad scope of the child welfare and rehabilitation work being carried on by auxiliary units throughout the country. More than 400,000 children have been cared for at an expenditure exceeding $2,500,000, she said, and these boys and girls are not necessarily the children of veterans—they may be any who are in need of assistance.

Auxiliary Gives Aid to Veterans

In addition, the auxiliary has spent $964,000 on rehabilitation, and "more valuable than the money spent is the time and interest given by the members who visit the veterans' hospitals and the leper colonies, bringing something of the outside world to those who cannot go out to find entertainment and companionship," said Mrs. Hahn.

"Schools have been established for hospital visitors and social service workers to assure the most intelligent and helpful work in this direction. We also watch the families of the men in the hospitals, and when the veterans are again able to return home find work for them and see that they resume their place in the community."

Under Americanism and national defense, Mrs. Hahn outlined a four-point program favored by the auxiliary: Neutrality (and our Government's policy was commended as one meeting the organization's approval); adequate national defense; the universal service act, and a stand by this country making clear that we do not desire to interfere with the policies of other countries, but that neither will we countenance any activity designed to trespass on our own democratic form of government.

Mrs. Hahn, a young and attractive woman with black hair and keen, dark eyes, wore a black wide-mesh gown trimmed with black sequins on the skirt and border of the deep bertha which trimmed it.

Mrs. Killeen reported for the District of Columbia Department an expenditure of $1,500 in child welfare, of which Miss Minnie May Hardy is chairman. Scholarships for Columbia University School of Law were awarded to a son and a daughter of a veteran, she announced. She also spoke of the Fidac program under the chairmanship of Mrs. Mary R. Klaphaak; the rehabilitation, under Miss Ada Riley, and Americanism, under Mrs. Catherine Hood. Miss Edna McIntosh, who was chairman of membership during the year, also is chairman of arrangements for the department convention.

Secretary Johnson Speaks on Defense

The Assistant Secretary of War, Louis A. Johnson, past national commander of the American Legion, was one of the guests of honor on last night's program, and spoke briefly, declaring that those who have already been through war want to be adequately prepared, so we shall not get into another. He was there, he said, in the capacity of a past commander of the legion, rather than in his present official position in the War Department.

Mrs. Killeen was escorted to the platform by a guard of honor composed of juniors, who wore white satin dresses, blue capes lined with gold, and blue caps. They included Miss Mary Wynn McCarthy, Miss Mary Therese Dyer, Miss Mary Eleanor McCabe, Miss Rose Mary Fone, Miss Geresa McIntyre, Misses Helen and Elaine Sullivan, Miss Dorothy Mace, Miss Allie Belle Wright, and Miss Jean Mulzey.

Music was provided by the Fort Stevens Band, by Estelle Hunt Dean, who sang a group of solos, and by the Junior Glee Club, which was formed this year under the direction of Mrs. Mary McMillen. The Sons of the Legion Drum Corps also played.

Among those on the platform with the auxiliary officers were Horace Lineburg, outgoing department commander of the legion, and Thomas Mason, the new commander.

THE A. A. U. W. clubhouse buzzes with conversation and clicks with tea cups—or iced tea glasses—every Monday afternoon no matter how hot the summer day. The list of vacationers in the club membership would almost discourage a lone chairman of midsummer gatherings at a glance, but experience has taught those who arrange the A. A. U. W. parties that people do turn out for them, no matter what.

Yesterday was an example. No program was prepared; it was just what is commonly known as a get-together, a genial talkfest for those who have just returned from trips, those poised on the point of starting off on them and those who like Washington well enough to stay home for the summer and like it.

About 40 members and guests were there, and everyone enjoyed the afternoon. Mrs. Winters Haycock was the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Richard Carlson and Mrs. Thomas Groover. Several new members were there, too, to be welcomed by the others. The new ones included Mrs. Dora M. Ihle, Miss Evelyn Lambert and Mrs. Coralie Schubert.

Mrs. Forest Hill, who has just returned from a pleasant tour through the West, was on hand to "get the hand" of the tea parties, for she is to assist with them for the remainder of the season. Mrs. Marshall Harris has been in charge for the summer. Judge Lucy Somerville Howorth (one of the brilliant and distinguished Southern women in responsible official positions in Washington) has just returned from a visit in Atlantic City and in her home in Mississippi, and she, too, was there.

The teas will continue the rest of this month and through September, bridging the gap until the club opens its regular program the first of October. Next Monday afternoon a musicale will be presented by three students of Prof. Otto Torney Simon.

MEMBERS of the Congressional Club are interested in the prospective return to Washington of Mrs. Robert J. Gamble, whose husband for more than 20 years was a member of Congress from South Dakota. She was known as one of the most beautiful women in the Capital during her residence here and had many friends who are hoping she will come again to reside.

Her son, Ralph, who is now a member of the New York Legislature, is slated to run for Congress in the next election and, if he is elected, his mother will probably come to the Capital with him. His wife died about a year ago.

Printers' Wives Will Be Feted

Cocktail Party Is Feature of Activities Booked for Tonight.

A VARIED PROGRAM of social activities is taking place at Wardman Park Hotel this week for the wives of members of the Union Printers International Baseball League, meeting in Washington for their twenty-seventh tournament.

In charge of the entertainment of the approximately 200 women are Mrs. Charles Holbrook, Mrs. James Dewhart and Mrs. G. Gerard Edwards.

Equally as interested in baseball as their husbands, they are spending much of their time at the series of games between the members of the league from St. Louis, St. Paul, Chicago, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, Detroit, Boston, New York, Baltimore and the District—which cities form the largest amateur baseball league in the world.

Featuring today's entertainment will be a cocktail party, beginning at 9:30 p. m., at which souvenirs of their Washington visit will be presented to all the wives of the league members. A tour of the Government Printing Office, with dinner in Harding Hall, is scheduled for this afternoon.

The outstanding social event of the meeting will be an elaborate fashion show at the Wardman Park pool on Wednesday, to be followed by a water carnival, buffet supper and dance.

Takoma Park Women Inspect Oak Herb Farm

Mrs. Henry Rawdon Entertains Party at Luncheon; Mrs. J. N. Quinn Presides at Meeting and Receives Floral Gift.

The garden section of the Takoma Park Woman's Club not only meets during the summer but is unique among the club departments in having only summer meetings. Its season is as long as that of its sister sections but is from March through October, when members can put to practical use what they gain from the programs.

Yesterday they met at 10 o'clock at the District Library in Takoma Park for a trip to the Weathered Oak Herb Farm at Bradley Hills, beyond Bethesda. There they were taken on a tour of the gardens where were growing all kinds of herbs including those classified as mentioned in the Bible and in Shakespeare's works.

Mrs. Rawdon Entertains.

After an hour there, the group drove 3 miles further to the new home of Mrs. Henry S. Rawdon, recently built on a portion of her father's old farm. She entertained them as her guests at luncheon. It was to have been a sweet-corn luncheon, with the corn fresh from the farm, but two crops have come and gone and a third was not ripe, so the corn was dispensed with.

Not only was the new house of interest to the members, but the grounds were closely inspected; for suggestions from the garden section were incorporated in the landscaping plan worked out by Mrs. Rawdon. When she and Mr. Rawdon were ready to build the house, she asked members of the section to assist her in plans for the grounds and yesterday they had their first opportunity to see how their suggestions had been worked out.

Mrs. J. N. Quinn, chairman of the section, presided at the short business meeting held following the luncheon, and Mrs. Elmer E. Boyner was in charge of the program. Mrs. Quinn was presented by the members of the section with a wooden bowl filled with flowers.

A luncheon either preceding or following the meetings is one of the features of the section's monthly gatherings.

Mrs. Harmon Present.

Among those in the party yesterday were Mrs. Walter Harmon, the new president of the Takoma Park Club, who is a member of the garden section; Mrs. Byron Coon, the retiring president, who is also a member; Mrs. F. A. Shumaker, secretary-treasurer of the section; Mrs. E. J. Hurdle, chairman of publicity; Mrs. Elmer E. Boyner, program chairman and vice chairman of the section; Mrs. Albert Lingle, chairman of the luncheons; Mrs. L. O. Reginbal, Mrs. M. R. Cooper, Miss Agnes Carleton, Mrs. LeBland Burdette, Mrs. L. M. Spray, Mrs. Mabel Himmelwright, Mrs. W. H. Walker, Mrs. Maulsby W. Blackman, Mrs. I. H. Richmond, Mrs. C. E. Davis, Mrs. C. B. Smith and her mother, Mrs Q. A. Smith; Mrs. W. H. Burk, Mrs. Henry Ewing, Mrs. T. C. Thee, Mrs Erwin L. Clark, Mrs. R. I. Huston, Mrs. Andrew Pratt, Mrs. Richard D. Turpen, Mrs. G. Franklin Wisner, Mrs. H. C. Stewell, of St. Paul, Minn., the guest of Miss Carleton; Mrs. Maude Snyder, Mrs. Alfred Hardesty, Mrs. G. H. Goodman, the guest of Mrs. Harmon, and Mrs. Fred Keplinger, who was a speaker at the July meeting.

Hagerstown Air Mail Service to Start Soon

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Aug. 16. — Air-mail service from Hagerstown with a pick-up of airmail at the Hagerstown airport will be started shortly, Postmaster Jacob T. Hartle said. Stamp collectors are deluging the local postoffice with letters bearing airmail stamps for first-day mailing.

He said he understood that the Tri-State Aviation Corporation, Wheeling, W. Va., has the contract for installing needed equipment. The air-mail sacks will be picked up by mail planes in flight by use of a dragline.

Gnome Mice, Prairie Dogs, Flying Squirrels Urged as Pets

Post Staff Photos.

Above is one of the gay blades of the rodent kingdom, the flag-striped gray squirrel. He's somewhat of a Beau Brummel and makes an excellent pet. Below is a pocket mouse, who is a nice companion around the house or apartment.

Prairie dogs are playful as puppies. They bark when nobody pays attention to them. As pets they are no end satisfactory. Of course, they've got to have a place in which to dig and exercise the industry with which Mother Nature endowed them.

Above is another first-rate pet, source of amusement and pleasure to whoever owns him. He is the Richardson ground squirrel, and quite a wheel spinner. Below is the desert kangaroo rat. He is nocturnal and domesticates very well.

Have you a small mammal in your home—say a gnome mouse a flying squirrel, a prairie dog, or a common skunk? If not, it's your own loss and it just goes to show you are not well versed in small mammal-ology.

Dr. Ernest P. Walker, acting director of the Zoo, does not exactly advocate small mammals for pets—but he is sure there are no better ones.

The good things to be said for small mammals include their availability (the woods are full of them), the ease with which they can be domesticated, and their entertainment qualities.

Take the pocket mouse, for instance. Dr. Walker kept one as a pet on his desk for four years. For a small apartment and a family with members who like to be up late at night, this tiny rodent is practically perfect. He weighs from 5 to 7 grams, never touches a drop to drink, and keeps his shiny shiny fur scrupulously clean. He hops along like a kangaroo when he wishes to get any place and he's likely to be up spinning wheels until all hours of the morning.

Few animals are more fun than prairie dogs. They can be kept as easily as the ordinary pup, Dr. Walker said, except they have to have a place to dig.

"They are absolutely ideal as pets, and they love to be petted. They bark if you fail to notice them. In some places they are so destructive that they themselves are being destroyed. It would be easy to get a prairie dog."

Also, Dr. Walker is sure, no cat or pup ever was a nicer pet than the common skunk. "He can be deodorized by a very simple process. He is picturesque, and he is good to keep on the lawn, because he catches so many insects. He is fond of milk, bread, and meat."

When it comes to ground squirrels—and Dr. Walker hopes you will come to know them—you can just about take your choice as to size and color. Wherever you live, it seems, there is a ground squirrel native to your area. Sometimes the variety near your home may have a disposition that "requires tact." More likely, though, he is eager to be tamed and given a wheel to spin. He goes to sleep at night—and during the winter.

Last, but just as important, is the white-footed mouse. His ears vary in length from rabbit shape to small ovals. He is a little larger than the house mouse, and is probably more plentiful. (There is no reason for anyone not having a white-footed mouse!) He will spin a wheel and then he is very entertaining, when he is washing himself and taking care of his clothes. He is nocturnal, but if coaxed will perform in day time, too.

He has fur-lined pockets that extend back to his shoulders, and they can be turned wrong side out just like ordinary pockets. If your eyes are keen enough you can watch him fill them up with seeds—provided you have given him some. You can train him to eat segments of orange and bits of apples and cakes, but the seeds are still necessary. His teeth would grow too long without them. His original home was in the wind-blown sands of southern Texas and northeast Mexico.

Now take the kangaroo rat—all the time remembering that the manner in which we call any small rodent a mouse and any large rodent a rat is one of the biggest mammal mistakes of all. The kangaroo rat is a nocturnal mammal and just in the mood for play when the family gets home from the movies. He looks like a miniature kangaroo and will spin the disk for anybody's entertainment. He needs only warmth, seeds, and an occasional piece of lettuce.

Then there's the flying squirrel. It is native to this region, although most people live a lifetime without seeing one. It takes a fairly large cage for him, because he glides through the air with the greatest of ease. After he is domesticated—which is easily done, Dr. Walker said—he probably would be happiest in a yard with a tree. His clothes always look too big for him, because of the extra fold attached to his wrist and ankles.

For a family that wants a pet only in the summer there is the common little chipmunk. He will hibernate in some cold basement corner, unless you want to keep him warm and thereby active.

Five Suspects Held in Series Of Robberies

Police Claim Quintet Members of 'Gas House Gang.'

Officers Assert Arrest of Four Others Solves Safe Crackings.

Arrest of five suspected members of the "Gas House Gang," members of whom have robbed stores, stolen automobiles and snatched purses, was announced by Inspector Bernard Thompson, chief of dectectives, last night.

On the right arm of each of the suspects was tatooed the figure 13. Detectives said there were 13 members in the gang, the tatooing being a gesture of gangland exhibitionism.

The prisoners were charged with housebreaking yesterday. They were arrested by Plainclothesmen Watson Salkeld, H. H. Carper, M. B. Moore and T. M. C. Vearry. They were in a stolen car at the time of their capture, the detectives said.

The four housebreaking jobs with which they are charged were Sanitary grocery jobs. A purse snatching, in which a pocketbook containing $400 was taken from a woman, also is charged to the gang.

Police said last night several other members of the "Gas House Gang" were serving sentences, while several others still are at large.

Meanwhile, headed by Inspector Thompson, detectives yesterday captured four colored men accused of a series of safe crackings in which more than $2,000 was taken.

Thompson said the arrest of the four cleared up safe robberies at the Garden T Shoppe, 1835 Columbia road northwest; the Yale Laundry, 437 New York avenue northwest; the Nunnally Candy Store, 1208 F street northwest, and a lunchroom in the 1200 block of U street northwest.

None of the loot was recovered, but parts of the inner boxes of the safes were seized as evidence along with burglar tools, found in a garage.

Police will try to recover the safe stolen from the Garden T Shoppe. The four colored men have asserted they dumped the heavy safe in the Potomac, not far from Hains Point, after taking its contents. Harbor police and possibly Navy divers may be enlisted to locate it.

Due to high tide, attempts to recover it yesterday were unavailing.

Taps Are Sounded ForReorganization

By the United Press.

Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky, yesterday blew taps over President Roosevelt's hopes for Government reorganization legislation at this session of Congress.

A few hours after the Senate committee named to study Mr. Roosevelt's demands had agreed on a bill less potent than that sought by the Chief Executive and that proposed by the late Senator Joe T. Robinson (Democrat), Arkansas, Barkley announced there would be no Senate action on the proposal before adjournment.

The House has passed a bill giving Mr. Roosevelt six White House secretaries and two-year authority to merge or abolish emergency bureaus and commissions. Representative Fred Vinson (Democrat), Kentucky, conferred with the Chief Executive yesterday and afterward said the House Committee on Federal Reorganization would meet today to consider another part of the program involving the Comptroller General's office.

U.S. Seizes Lawyer In Prison-Plot Case

Arrest in Louisville, Ky., late yesterday afternoon of Allen K. Jones, an attorney, on charges of conspiring to deliver a Federal prisoner from the Jefferson County Jail by smuggling arms into the prison, was announced by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The prisoner, Sherman Callaway, charged with attempted mail robbery, likewise will be charged with the offense for which the lawyer is held. Callaway was arrested near Louisville July 12, and jailed shortly afterward.

According to special agents of the F. B. I., Callaway arranged for an interview with Jones, and then paid him $150 in exchange for which the attorney smuggled a revolver into the jail.

Air Mail Bill Is Denounced By McKellar

Senator Filibusters Against Giving I. C. C. Rate-Making Powers.

Filibustering against the McCarran air transport bill, which would put rate-making for air carriers under the Interstate Commerce Commission, Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat) Tennessee, yesterday asked his colleagues not to pass the legislation which, he said, would "turn air mail over to the aviation companies without let or hindrance."

In opposing the measure, Senator McKellar declared the bill if passed would "root up" a system which had been successful, resulting in "worse air mail scandals than this country has ever seen."

He charged the measure would in reality turn rate-making authority over to Norman B. Haley, air mail director of the I. C. C., characterized as a "lobbyist" for the air mail carriers.

Truman Defends Haley.

At that point Senator Harry S. Truman, of Missouri, broke in to explain to McKellar that Haley is not in charge of rate-making for the I. C. C., and asked if Senator McKellar thought Haley a lobbyist during a conference at the White House.

"Oh, I don't suppose he gets paid for it," McKellar responded, "but he is one of the best and strongest lobbyists for the aviation companies."

Continuing his attack on Director Haley, Senator McKellar charged the McCarran measure was drafted in "Room 212" of a local hotel, by "representatives of the aviation companies in conference with Haley."

Wheeler Joins Fight.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, interrupted to tell McKellar that "in fairness to Haley, it should be noted he went to that hotel room at the request of the Interstate Commerce Commission, as everybody on the Interstate Commerce Committee knows."

"He went there," Senator Wheeler said, "because they were working on the bill after hours. If there is anything wrong about his working overtime in a hotel room, then we shouldn't blame an employe who was working under orders."

During the debate Senator McKellar read frequently from Haley's testimony before the Interstate Commerce Committee when hearings were being held on the bill. He declared he planned to read more from the hearings this afternoon.

'Babes inToyland' Draws 12,000 in St. Louis

St. Louis, Aug. 16 (AP).—The largest opening night attendance in the 19-year history of the St. Louis Municipal Opera turned out tonight for Victor Herbert's musical fantasy, "Babes in Toyland." The paid attendance was 10,404, and the open air theater's 2,000 free seats in the rear always are occupied.

Rev. John Mixon Would Widen Range of Welfare Spending

Public Agencies Should Be Allowed to Incur Deficits in Emergencies, Says Church Federation Official.

So acute is the need of welfare for Washington's poor that immediate steps must be taken even if the Board of Welfare's increased budget for 1939 is adopted, according to the Rev. John L. Mixon, secretary of the welfare division of the Washington Federation of Churches.

He suggests as a possible remedy for the situation that public welfare agencies be allowed to run a deficit. As it is, such agencies can spend only one-twelfth of their year's funds per month. When this sum is exhausted, additional applicants for aid must be turned away or referred to the Federation of Churches, which recently inaugurated an emergency fund for welfare purposes.

Established in July, this fund of several hundred dollars was spent before the end of the month. A second sum of about the same size was raised, only to be exhausted within two weeks. Since Saturday, the federation's welfare division has been forced to deny assistance to needy applicants.

More Latitude Needed.

Mr. Mixon feels the problem is one to be solved by the community rather than by the churches. He feels that greater latitude in the administration of public agencies' funds would tide many families over their present acute distress.

Another source of embarrassment to the welfare division is the number of jobless employables which are referred to it from other agencies. Public and private agencies allot no funds to aid persons able to work but unable to find jobs.

"These agencies call as many of their applicants as they can employables, and turn them over to us" Mr. Mixon explained. "They consider us a last resort. They have been swamping us with demands since they heard of our fund, but now we are unable to handle the cases they send us."

He plans an appeal to the churches but does not expect to receive from them enough to meet the need. "This situation is far beyond the resources of the churches anyway," he feels.

The chief types of applicants which come to the welfare division are WPA workers who, while ineligible for relief, are not paid enough to support their families; large families crowded into one or two rooms; unemployable employables, and parents seeking aid for their children.

In the last-named group are many who would be willing to starve themselves if they could get food for their children. Some are in such straitened circumstances they try to give their children away to other families or to place them in orphanages.

The prize lists for the show are now available and any one caring for a copy may have same by communicating with Vincent P. Lester, secretary, Forest Glen, Md.

Hod Carriers' Union Accused Of 'Red Tactics'

Lester Attack Proposal to Call Strike of D. C. Refuse Collectors.

Robert C. Lester, financial secretary of the District Central Labor Union and representative of the teamster's union, last night charged that Hod Carriers Local 466 is "communistically inclined."

Addressing the meeting of the Central Labor Union in Typographical Temple, 423 G street northwest, he stated the strike which James T. Kimbroe has been threatening to call in recent weeks among District garbage collectors would be illegal, and a "deliberate attempt to 'stab' Commissioner Dan I. Sultan in the back."

Lester said Kimbroe, who heads the hod carriers' local, had attempted to take jurisdiction of the drivers of District garbage trucks away from the teamsters' union.

"The teamsters' union would not countenance such a strike as Kimbroe has been threatening to call, nor would we permit a strike of our members which would tie up District garbage collections and allow garbage and perishable foodstuffs to pile up in the city," he stated.

Nearly 100 members of the Central Labor Union attended the meeting, and voted to send a delegate from their group to the national convention of the American Federation of Labor, to be held in October at Denver, Colo. Election of a delegate is scheduled for September 20.

A resolution seeking support of the gathering for a bill to require two operators on all District street cars and buses was referred to the resolutions committee.

Delegates from a recently organized union, Elevator Operators and Starters Local 121, were recognized and seated for the first time in the union.

Son of Philippine Official, en Route Home, Flees Train

Jose Ohmena, son of the Vice President of the Philippines, was "missing" yesterday somewhere between Chicago and New York, and the Philippine commissioner's office said he had frustrated an attempt to return him to the islands at his father's request.

Railroad officials told Commissioner Quintin Paredes their promises to keep Osmena on a train West-bound from Washington until it reached the West Coast were frustrated at Chicago, when Osmena threatened to sue the Pennsylvania Railroad if anyone tried to interfere with his free movements.

They added that Osmena, although without funds, was reported to have taken a Greyhound) bus from Chicago to New York.

The steamer President Grant sailed from Seattle Saturday without Osmena, although the purser had a ticket and money for the Vice President's son wired to him from the Philippine Islands.

3,000 Are Expected At Catholic Conclave

Cleveland, Aug. 15 (AP).—Officials of the tenth national convention of the Catholic Sstudents' Mission Crusade, officially opening here tomorrow, prdicted tonight attendance would reach 3,000. They said special trains would bring 700 from Cincinnati, 500 from Brooklyn, 200 from Louisville, Ky., and 100 from Detroit.

Archbishop Francis J. L. Beckman, of Dubuque, Iowa, will preside at the reception tomorrow.

500 North Carolina Democrats Frolic on River Cruise; Singing and Dancing Features Excursion of Club Here

It was a Virginia moon that shone last night as 400 members of the North Carolina Democratic Club and their guests sailed down the Potomac on the S. S. City of Washington for their first outing.

But this minor discrepancy was more than atoned for when the party gathered on deck and proved their loyalty to their native State by giving a wholehearted rendition of "Carolina Moon."

Able direction for the singers was provided by Representative Graham A. Barden of North Carolina, who was spelled off at intervals by Henry M. Brown, jr., cousin of Senator Robert R. Reynolds.

As the evening wore on and the excursionists grew more mellow, they tolerantly erased State boundary lines and sang "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny" with equal vigor.

Accompaniment for the musical portion of the evening was furnished by a 4-piece orchestra which Brown said he imported from North Carolina for the occasion. Wherever they came from, they met with the hearty approval of the party. Particularly successful was the orchestra's vocalist, who used as a megaphone a paper cup from which the bottom had been torn out, and the diminutive percussion-player, whose only instrument was a washboard beaten with a drum stick.

Other notables present included Representatives Harold D. Cooney and Zebulon Weaver, both from the State whose sons and daughters were staging the get-together.

In addition to the impromptu group singing, entertainment included dancing to the boat's orchestra. An artist was on hand to sketch the members of the party for the benefit of posterity. And for those who cared neither for posterity nor for dancing, the lights on the top deck were kept romantically dim.

The affair, which is to be made an annual event, marks the close of the club's activities until September 15, when it will have its initial meeting of the new season and its election of officers.

Officers of the club are Wesley E. McDonald, president; Mrs. Katherine Cowan, first vice president; Col. W. J. Simpson, second vice president; Richard Sewall, treasurer; Mrs. Lucille Lennox, corresponding secretary, and Miss Lillian Hall, recording secretary.

William Hodges was chairman of the committee on arrangements, and was assisted by Mrs. Nellie P. Cooke, Mrs. Lennox, Mrs. Cowan, Douglas Fletcher, C. A. Rainey, James Thomas, Young Smith and Mrs. Winnie Asbury.

The club was formed last season with 700 members, and sent 3,800 absentee votes back to North Carolina in the November election. Its social functions included a victory ball, given in November; a Congressional banquet in February and an Independence ball in May. All of them have been given at the Raleigh Hotel, which is the organization's headquarters.

New Language Developing in Picture Making

Film Technicians Use Odd Vernacular in Their Work.

"Drop a spider from those flies, so we can line up these rifles," shouted Henry Koster.

"Bear down on that tickle tooter and get a little soul into those grunt irons," said Leopold Stokowski, running his celebrated fingers through his bushy hair.

Deanna Durbin didn't say anything. She just sat between Adolphe Menjou and Mischa Auer, grinning contentedly and munching an apple.

Your reporter thought for a moment that he had stumbled into a preview of the building of the Tower of Babel. Not so. We were only watching the making of Deanna Durbin's second picture, "100 Men and a Girl," which will be ready for the screen in September. It is being filmed at the Universal studio by Producer Joseph Pasternak and Director Henry Koster, the same pair who engineered Deanna's screen debut in "Three Smart Girls." It is not a musical, but there is plenty of music in it.

Deanna plays little Patsy Cardwell, whose father, acted by Adolphe Menjou, is an unemployed slide trombonist. Patsy gets the idea of organizing a symphony orchestra of 100 jobless musicians and persuades Leopold Stokowski, world famous conductor, to lead it. In the course of the story Deanna sings two songs of the semipopular type. Stokowski has charge of all the musical doings and also appears in the role of himself.

The impression of the Tower of Babel simply cannot be avodied when musicians and movie technicians meet. Each faction speaks its own language. To the movie mechanic, a "spider" is a connection socket on a thin wire. "Flies" are the catwalks high above the set. A "grunt iron" is a tuba. So when Koster called for his "spider" he simply wanted a socket to connect up the big lights. And Stokowski's strange-sounding orders were merely a plea for a little more cooperation from his trombone artists and tuba compers as his 100-piece orchestra went through the overture from "Zampa."

The set for this scene represented a garage which the jobless musicians were using for their rehearsal hall. Bicycles hung from the ceiling and tools were pushed back against the walls. The musicians, many of them veterans of the leading European and American orchestras, took their places on old chair and soap boxes along the ramps. The great conductor's podium was a pile of greasy tires.

Following this sequence, Director Koster moved the action to another set, representing Deanna's humble home. Here we watched Papa Menjou giving his daughter a music lesson while Mischa Auer accompanied her on an old-fashioned square piano. Deanna sang one of her songs, "It's Raining Sunbeams," although only the silent business of the scene was actually being filmed. She had already recorded the number for the sound track, some days previously. Once a song has been separately recorded, singers usually go through a group scene by merely pantomiming the notes and lyrics with their lips without really uttering a sound, so we asked Deanna why she deviated from the general rule.

"I do it because I can sink better that way," smiled Deanna. No, "sink" is not a typographical error for the word sing. In movie lingo, "sinking" means synchronizing. And synchronizing means timing the actions and lip movements with the real song which one has separately warbled into the sound machines far from the set. "When I just made believe in screen tests or rehearsals," continued Deanna, "without really singing, I found I couldn't keep as good time. The pantomime movements of my lips weren't natural and it was harder to feel the part I was playing. Then I began singing in my synchronizing scenes and everything worked all right. It's no trouble because I just love to sing."

Deanna is getting to be quite a big girl now. She is half way to her fifteenth birthday. Her voice has grown in power since she took the public by storm in "Three Smart Girls," just as her teacher, Andres De Segurola, former bafytone of the Metropolitan opera, predicted it would. She is a bit taller and even prettier than before, but we found no other noticeable change. In spite of the worldwide fame that has come to the gifted little Canadian, almost overnight, she is still the same lovable, unspoiled kid she was a year ago. She goes to school every day and plays baseball in her spare time.

Two of the players who scored with Deanna in "Three Smart Girls" are with her again in her second picture. They are Mischa Auer and Alice Brady. Auer plays one of the out-of-work musicians. Miss Brady does another of her scatterbrain roles as a society matron who promises Deanna to back the proposed orchestra and then forgets all about it. Eugene Pallette, who was Miss Brady's long-suffering husband in "My Man Godfrey" has the same job in "100 Men and a Girl."

In Which a Play Critic Embarks for Hains Point And His Apologetic 'Stand-In' Confesses All

Reviewer Pro Tem Discovers 'You Can't Have Everything' Sums Up His Patronage of Current First-Runs and Resolves to Do Some Catching-Up; Notes on Coming Attractions and Miscellany.

By Gerald G. Gross.
Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

And so the regular conductor of this column packed his tooth brush and riding breeches in a satchel, said "Take it away, fellow, it's yours for a couple of weeks" and then made a beeline for that vacation haunt of his, Hains Point.

Proxying for N. B. B. is no longer a novelty for yours truly, but this particular fortnight of substituting begins with his "stand in" in a shamefully unenlightened position, at least in so far as current screen fare is concerned. The bald, unadulterated fact is that this theater critic pro tem, as he takes over the reins at this time, has looked upon only three of the pictures now being shown at the major downtown houses—and one of them is a revival, "Rose Marie," and another, "Saratoga," is a return engagement. Only our good fortune in seeing "You Can't Have Everything" on the Steel Pier in Atlantic City last Friday night saves us from a first-run shutout.

It seems obvious, therefore, that we have a whale of a lot of catching-up to do between now and Friday, when most of the theaters change their bills, if we are to make any pretense of being posted on the amusement situation locally. From all reports, "The Toast of New York" at RKO-Keith's certainly is something not to be missed. Nor are Bill Robinson and "Mr. Dodd" at the Earle, Rialto's "The Man Who Could Work Miracles" and anything containing Hugh Herbert and Mischa Auer, as does the Met's "Marry the Girl," to be allowed to slip away without at least an attempt being made to take them in.

Most emphatically of all, "The Good Earth," is not going to get away this time without being unspooled for these glims. We missed it at the National on its roadshow run and we've yet to amble down to the Palace for its current showing but, so help us Muni, it wont's be long now.

Eager not only to rectify our recent neglect of the Washington cinema but to take a peek into the future, as all conscientious drama critics should do, we are accepting Ray Bell's kind invitation to preview "Broadway Melody of 1938" tonight— no, we mean last night. Shucks, what we mean is this: "Broadway Melody" was to be screened at Loew's Capitol last night (Monday) at an hour far too late to be commented upon in this morning's paper. This is the Robert Taylor-Eleanor Powell costarring vehicle which opens at the Palace Friday.

And if you were exasperated, as you had every right to be, at the confusing time element, well, Powell-eeze excuse it.

Ouch!

One of the privileges which goes with this substitute's role is reading N. B. B.'s mail. And, sometimes, passing on its contents. First item to come to hand is an illustrated postcard addressed to Nelson Bell, by Jack Powell, that black-faced drummer so well known to Washington audiences, who writes from Copenhagen, Denmark, to say: "I'm playing at the Arena Theater in Copenhagen. My very best to all. Your drummer boy, Jack Powell."

Radio, generally considered the "baby" among entertainment mediums, has just discovered that instead of being the child, it can justly claim to being the daddy of the new Jack Benny filmusical, "Artists and Models," which opens next Friday at the Earle Theater, with a cast headed by Benny, Ida Lupino, Gail Patrick, Richard Arlen, Ben Blue, Judy Canova, Louis Armstrong's Swing Orchestra, Martha Raye, Connie Boswell and Andre Kostelanetz's Orchestra.

Benny, starring in the film, is heard regularly every Sunday (in season) over a coast-to-coast hookup. Misses Lupino and Patrick and Arlen have appeared many times as guest stars on nationally-broadcast programs. Judy Canova, hill-billy comedienne, gained her tremendous popularity, which led to the offer to appear in "Artists and Models," on the air, and Connie Boswell is a member of the famous Boswell Sisters, radio songstresses.

Martha Raye disports herself on the air every week—Andre Kostelanetz and his Orchestra are a regular weekly feature—and Louis Armstrong's Swing Orchestra has swing devotees hanging over the loud-speaker oblivious to everything but Ol' Louis' trumpet blaring away.

Hero-cheering and villain-hissing will be in vogue tonight at the Sylvan Theater in Washington Monument Grounds when that familiar melodrama, "The Drunkard," is presented as the tenth Summer Festival production. Producer is the Langley Lambs Club, director is M. Forney Reese and side dishes will include plenty heartrending olio numbers by the Estelle Wentworth singers and a version of the Floradora Sextette by the drama group of St. Thomas Episcopal Church.

Lya Lys, who makes her English-speaking screen debut in "The Great Gambini," which opens at the Metropolitan Friday, derived her stage name from the national flower of France the fleur de lys . . . those who missed "Slave Ship" when it played the Capitol recently are hereby notified that this action-packed tale of the slave trade comes to the Columbia Friday for a repeat engagement . . . John J. Payette, general zone manager of the Warner interests, yesterday announced "King Solomon's Mines," hailed by previewers as the finest film of its kind since "Trader Horn," for showing at the Metropolitan the week of August 27 . . . "Broadway Melody of 1938," next at Loew's Palace, presents Eleanor Powell as a "team dancer" for the first time on the screen . . . her partner is George Murphy, and she also does a novelty number with Buddy Ebsen and Murphy . . . 10 per cent of all earnings of Reginald Denny, a member of "The Great Gambini" cast, are being set aside for a fund to perfect a radio-directed flying bomb with which he hopes to make the United States invulnerable by land, air or sea.

This is another busy day of rehearsing for "Going Native," and tomorrow will be still busier. Thursday comes the lull, with only makeup lessons and final costume fittings on Producer Gene Ford's calendar, but at the unholy hour of 6 o'clock on Friday morning the entire company will plunge into a full dress rehearsal for the 1937 renewal of Washington's own musical extravaganza. Ray Bell reports, incidentally, that the sweetheart of rehearsals, which are being held at the Willard hotel, is blonde Claire Gregoire, singer and dancer from Columbus, Ohio, who will sing "Getting the Hot Foot," swing tune composed especially for "Going Native" by Producer Ford and Elwood Wilson, of the Capitol Orchestra.

The Roadside

Out there on Rockville pike way the villain last night began his second week of pursuing the heroine in "The Haunted Mill." His diabolic quest, we are assured by the Roadside Players' management, will continue to be futile during this final week of the engagement.

The mustached arch-field in this old vintage mellerdrammer by Bernard Francis Moore is ably played by Rudolph Justice Watson. He is admirably foiled by Hero Ralph Patton, abetted by Fred Haskin, allowing Heroine Betty Boyers to dry her tears and her feeble mother to retain the old homestead.

"The Haunted Mill" is, if you ask, a pretty empty piece of writing, but this slight fault is eclipsed by the thorough going-over which the cast of nine gives Mr. Moore's opus.

Star and Consul Plan Visit to Italy

Nino Martini, famous opera tenor and screen star, and Cesare Grimaldi, Italian consul in Los Angeles, plan to visit Italy together this fall. Martini will attend the marriage of his sister in Verona, while Grimaldi, accompanying him, will combine business with pleasure.

The two expect to leave New York on the liner Rex either this month or next, depending on how soon Martini will be able to leave Hollywood after completing his current picture, "Music for Madame."

Phone Costs Rise As Sonja Departs

Every time Sonja Henie goes out of town, Tyrone Power's telephone bill mounts by leaps and bounds.

Now that Sonja is on her way for a vacation in her native Norway after finishing her last Twentieth Century-Fox picture, "Thin Ice," the long-distance tolls have begun to add up. Knowing his present shooting schedule at the studio, where he is now filming "In Old Chicago," Sonja was able to time his arrival at home after work and put in a call from the S. S. Queen Mary, in midocean more than half way to London. There will be many more calls between Hollywood and Oslo.

Alice Designs Novel Handbag

The vogue for butterflies as a motif for printed frocks, jeweled pins, et cetera, has been effectively transferred to the realm of handbags by Alice Fay, star of "In Old Chicago." To match an evening frock that is trimmed with iridescent butterflies, Alice has designed a bag of changeable blue and rose taffeta. Down the center of one side is a 6-inch, rhinestone-studded body of a butterfly, with the flared folds of taffeta cut to resemble wings.

Here's What's Meant by 'Lucky Dog'

Pupchen, who seems hardly less camera-wise than his mistress, Joan Crawford, obediently faces the photographer in the course of an afternoon at the star's Brentwood home. Miss Crawford returns to the screen soon in what has been called her greatest dramatic role as the heroine of "The Bride Wore Red." Hollywood's foremost woman director, Dorothy Arzner, will direct.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Aug. 16.—This morning I received a sizzling letter from a woman in Des Moines who rose to oratorical heights in damning Hollywood and everyone in it because we have so many divorces here. "A hideous blot on civilization!" she said. "Why can't the people in Hollywood respect their marriage vows?"

MAE WEST.

I do not feel qualified to judge the sinfulness of divorce here or anywhere else, but after watching Hollywood parade back and forth I think I can cite at least three reasons why screen star marriages fail. Reason No. 1 is this: the public—which means you, and you and you—turn John or Jane Star's head with your adulation. How can a girl with a normal weakness for flattery, read three thousand gushing fan letters a week, see herself glorified in the magazines and the newspapers, be mobbed for autographs—and still be content with a man who treats her like an ordinary human being?

Reason No. 2: Too much ready cash. How many wives of four or five years standing can boast of a "no-quarrel" record? How many of them would have filed suit for divorce if they had had enough money to guarantee their livelihoods? Reason No. 3: Not enough children. Having a baby often wrecks the career of an actress. It means that she must leave the screen for months and the competition in this business being as keen as it is—and the fans' memories as short as they are—there is always the chance that the "months" may stretch out and become forever. Unfortunately, marriages in Hollywood need children to preserve them, just as marriages elsewhere do.

Too much admiration, too much money, not enough babies—those are the real reasons for the Hollywood divorce epidemic.

Had a chat this afternoon with Mae West and the conversation drifted, as conversations with Mae always do, to sex appeal. I wonder how many of you realize that Mae has won a fortune through the public misunderstanding of her comedy. "They call me the world's greatest exponent of sex appeal," she laughed. "And all I have ever done is to burlesque sex appeal, poke fun at love and satirize romance. I've kidded Dan Cupid unmercifully—and people have taken my kidding seriously. Every time an interviewer sees me, he wants my formula for 'getting your man.' I've dished out more recipes than a White House cook book—and the laugh of it is that I've always been too busy to try one out, personally."

Come to think of it, Mae never has 'got a man' to the altar—unless you count Frank Wallace. And she has spent a lot of money trying to get rid of him.

Whenever that word, "money," is mentioned, I automatically think of the word, "agent." Actor's agent, to be specific. This town is fairly crawling with actor's agents and the successful ones take in more lucre than any star that ever wore grease paint. They charge each client 10 per cent of his total earnings and many agents have as many as 30 big-shot players on the dotted line, as well as a raft of smaller fry. Figure out the financial possibilities for yourself. The phase of the business that makes me burn is this: almost every one of the big-shot flesh-brokers is a relative of some studio mogul who not only gives his clients preference but, in the most blatant cases, actually refuses to hire players who are not handled by the "right" agency. There ought to be a law. Maybe there is.

The sight of Greta Garbo, loping like a scared jackrabbit across the M-G-M lot reminded me of the wildest rumor ever concocted in this gossipy village. About nine years ago, when her yen for isolation was still a hot subject of debate, someone reported that the real Garbo was dead, that her death had been concealed and that the girl using her name in Metro pictures was Geraldine Dvorak, once her double, who was forced to live in absolute solitude for fear the studio's hoax would be exposed. Hollywood remembered the Dvorak girl, who did look enough like Garbo to be her twin, and an amazing number of people accepted the rumor as truth. It still pops up now and then.

Camel Mourns.

A camel mourning for her calf, that had died the day before, ruined most of an afternoon's shooting on the set of "Ali Baba Goes to Town," starring Eddie Cantor. Every time Cantor started to speak his lines, the camel began moaning. The camel was necessary to the scenes and nothing could be done except to keep reshooting them.

Wrong Cut.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Aug. 16.

ON APRIL 28 I reported: "Bart Schilling is the actor who was selected for the Nazi Storm Trooper role in WPA's 'Professor Mamlock.' At the rehearsals he gave his performance a brutal, realistic touch—a perfect portrayal which drew applause even at rehearsals . . . Two days before the show opened, however, Schilling resigned mysteriously . . . Yesterday his whereabouts were discovered. The Storm Trooper of the stage is in Madrid now, fighting for the loyalists."

• • • •

BY WAY OF PARIS—so as to avoid censorship—came this letter from Schilling. It was written in Huete, Spain, and was mailed July 29. It reads:

• • • •

"A WHILE AGO I received a letter from my friends, in which was inclosed a clipping from your column in the New York Post. The contents concerned me, for I am the Storm Trooper of the stage, Bart Schilling, of the WPA production of 'Prof. Mamlock,' now fighting for the Abraham Lincoln Battalion in Spain.

• • • •

"I LIKED IT, of course, and would have written to you sooner, but believe me—I have had no time, and my mind was concerned with things other than writing . . .

• • • •

"You see, Mr. Lyons, that play, 'Prof. Mamlock,' sure hastened my leave to this place where I felt I belonged. And I didn't arrive too soon at that. Anyway, I am here now, and have been doing my share up until a few days ago, when our big offensive began.

• • • •

"OUR BRIGADE, the Fifteenth, had been attacking and attacking, and as you know—has been defeating the Fascists for days and nights, without stopping even for an hour's rest. On the morning of the fifth day, I was ordered, with my company, to take a certain hill. Well, we started, and—although this may sound like a bit of bragging—I was first to reach the crest of that hill. Boy, did I get a reception! A cross-fire of machine-gun, rifle fire, etc. The first wound I got was from an explosive bullet. In case you don't know what that is, it is a bullet which explodes as soon as it hits an object and then travels on. Well, I got that bullet in my right thigh. It felt as if my whole leg was torn off. It was suicide to remain at that crest, as there was no cover or protection whatsoever.

• • • •

"I TOLD THAT to a fellow-fighter who arrived a minute or two later. He was a section leader in the company of which I was the a commander. We decided to go down about 4 meters and take cover in a shell hole . . . I started—and just as I moved I got another bullet in my left leg, just above the knee. At the same time a piece of hand grenade knocked my rifle out of my hand. My companion yelled, as a bullet had hit him, too. I don't know where it hit him, but it was a fatal shot, for it killed him immediately.

• • • •

"I TRIED TO GET DOWN to the shell hole, but before I could start again I got another bullet, this time below the knee. I crept down there anyway, and reached that shell hole with three bullet wounds. I had only one dressing in my kit, and so I used it to dress the worst wound—which was the one inflicted by the explosive bullet. The other ones I didn't mind so much and paid no attention to them.

• • • •

"I WAS LUCKY to make the shell hole, as those bullets were coming too close to me to suit me . . . I tried to get more protection by lying flat on my belly and scraping the earth loose with the front of my helmet. It was a hell of a job in the burning sun, without a drop of drinking water—as my canteen looked more like a sieve than a canteen.

• • • •

"ANYWAY, AFTER A COUPLE OF HOURS, I fell asleep . . . I had been wounded at 10 a. m. and reached the shell hole at 10:30. In the afternoon, after further digging, I slept some more—until I was cruelly awakened by another hit. This time it was a bullet which traveled in an oblique line through my left foot—making it four hits in all . . . I couldn't do anything about it, as I had no gun any more, and was unable to get away . . . And so I lay there waiting for night to fall, so that the ambulance personnel could bring me to an ambulance. I knew it was humanly impossible to get me out of there in daylight, as that would have been suicide.

• • • •

"NIGHT FINALLY CAME—and after I had been in that shell hole for ten hours they got me down. It was no picnic . . . I was brought to the doctor, my wounds were dressed, and then I was taken to Madrid, to the converted Ritz Hotel, where the doctors operated on my right leg. My left leg was O. K., as all the bullets had gone through and through—a clean job.

• • • •

"IT WAS FUNNY, when I awoke after the operation. I looked around, and saw all the luxury. I was in a big room, twin beds, reading lamp, private bathroom, big mirrored closet—in short, a fine hotel room. So I thought that I had the D. T.'s, until the nurse came in and I realized this was real . . . Well, after sleeping for weeks and weeks in the open air, under the skies, I felt out of place, but soon felt right about it.

• • • •

"NOW I HAD TIME, and so, instead of writing you a note, I realize this is almost a book . . . I read that you were doing some good things to aid the loyalists. Well, it feels good to hear that, as they deserve the aid of all liberty-loving people . . . The hospital treatment here is great, and I have the deepest esteem for the doctors, nurses and all concerned with it. They work, work, work untiringly, and think it isn't a Titan's task. I have seen the wounded who come here, and it is great to witness such courage.

• • • •

"Anyway, as I started out to say, we drove those Fascists from that crest the next day—from that crest, and 10 kilometers more . . . Well, Mr. Lyons, that's all—and how!—Bart Schilling."

Sanders Makes Diamond Debut

George Sanders, star of Twentieth Centry-Fox' "Lancer Spy," played baseball for the first time in his life. Here is the English actor's humorous version of what happened:

"I'd never played this American game before, but I managed to catch a ball so spectacularly that they moved me in to third base, then let me become batter. I didn't know one was allowed to let balls pass, so I swiped at every ball that came and unally hit one and made a base, but when I got there somebody else was there, so we were all out or somthing. I didn't quite understand just what did happen, but it seems to be somewhat similar to our English game of 'rounders,' and I intend to master it."

Sanders was interscholastic boxing and swimming champion in England.

Makes Revision.

Joe Penner abandoned his proverbial cigar and tweed hat for the first time in the musical comedy, "The Life of the Party," in which he co-stars with Harriet Hilliard, Gene Raymond, Parkyakarkus, Victor Moore and Helen Broderick.

Fifteen Hats.

Forty-eight hours after they were ordered by telephone from New York stylists, 15 hats worn by Katharine Hepburn in "Stage Door," were received by air-mail in Hollywood. All but two were perfect in detail.

Too Busy.

Although he owns a summer home on Lake George, N. Y., Edward Everett Horton, star of "Oh, Doctor," seldom has leisure to visit it. He is one of the busiest players in Hollywood.

Without a Gun.

George O'Brien, without a gun, chaps or horse, is seen in the new picture, "Windjammer," a George Hirliman production, as a seagoing he-man in a shipboard adventure.

What It Takes!

Described as the "perfect American type." Jean Rouverol, in "The Road Back," is of English, Scotch, Swiss, French and German descent!

Dixie Advocates Colored Stockings

"Life Begins in College," the newest Twentieth Century-Fox picture to feature Dixie Dunbar, has given the petite dancer-actress some new ideas regarding the vividly colored stockings that will be gay accents to certain autumn dance frocks. Following a color scheme selected for one of this picture's costumes, Dixie has chosen "Melody Green" stockings, a clear emerald shade, to wear with a chartreuse chiffon dance dress that has just been purchased. The stockings are of course very sheer and the exact shade of the synthetic emeralds that band the halter neck.

Windsor Shade For Stars' Nails

"To tint or not to tint" is becoming an increasingly important question when it comes to feminine fingernails. A great many of Hollywood's smartest actresses are these days content with just plain buffing, or at least have left off the "burning hues" of former days. Gloria Stuart compromises. This attractive blonde actress who will next be seen in "Life Begins in College," selects a very soft "grayed" rose known as "Windsor Rose" for her favorite shade.

Steps Out.

Filmdom Miracle! Day Turned Night

Day was literally turned into night to save delay on Jane Withers' 20th Century-Fox picture, "Wild and Woolly." When fog banks drifting in from the Pacific Ocean, five miles away, obscured the sun and ended all thought of shooting the scheduled street scenes, Assistant Director Bill Eckhardt gave a couple of quick orders.

Within a half hour huge black canvasses had been thrown across the street, from rooftop to rooftop, and also inclosed the ends of the street, and the company went to work on night sequences.

Diploma.

As a graduating reward after finishing the studio's stock school, Marjorie Weaver, pretty black-eyed actress, was assigned the role of a college student in "Life Begins in College," starring the Ritz Brothers at Twentieth Century-Fox.

He's Smart.

John Howard, who plays the title role in Paramount's "Bulldog Drummond Comes Back," won a Phi Beta Kappa Key for scholarship while a student at Western Reserve University.

Big Fight Ballyhoo Goes Into High

By Shirley Povich.

New York, Aug. 16.

Any day, now, the professional tub-thumpers in charge of the Joe Louis-Tommy Farr fight ballhoo will start dusting off the old moth-eaten scripts and try to needle some interest into the contest which threatens to be fought in almost strict privacy on the night of August 26.

In fact, there's evidence that they may already be at work on the old ballyhooey. Late ballyhooey. Lately the mimeograph machines have been grinding out the observations of former champions to the effect that "Farr cannot be underated." In turning on the heat for a big fight, that is always the first time-honored step.

POVICH.

Jack Dempsey was first to check in with the statement that "Farr has a chance to upset Louis," and Jimmy Braddock stooged for the ballyhoo men yesterday when he went on record that "Farr will be no soft touch." Pretty soon you will hear from Gene Tunney and it's even money that old Tom Sharkey will have something to say. Its the old routine of the publicity department.

* * * *

And this Farr-Louis fight needs its publicity department like no other heavyweight title affair in recent years has needed one. Farr's proudest boast is a decision over Max Baer, and there is a well-defined suspicion that Mr. Mike Jacobs is attempting to foist a "floperoo on the public. Farr needs plenty of build-up for the big let-down that is in store for him when he climbs into the ring against Louis.

So, presently you will be hearing that the Britisher is knocking his sparring partners stiff and cold with punches that travel only 8 inches. And that his chief worry is getting sparmates who will stand up and punch with him. You are pretty sure to read that Farr has a mysterious plan of battle that will confound Louis and you'll see pictures of him with his fist buried to the elbow in the big training bag. And they certainly won't forget the invisible punch Farr is developing.

* * * *

And if they hew strictly to the old script you'll probably read that the challenger is being considered for the Carnegie Medal despite his modesty in failing to report how he swam 3 miles to save the lives of two beautiful damsels whose canoe overturned on the lake by his training camp. No build-up is complete without that one.

* * * *

But they won't be forgetting Louis, either. Their business is to whittle him down to Farr's size and they know how. Presently the ringside observers at Louis' training camp will begin to relate how the Negro looked bad in training for the past few days and apparently is not the same killer who slapped down Baer and Carnera and Sharkey and Braddock. In fact, you'll read that the odds on Louis are sure to drop.

* * * *

That is always the routine when heat is on. Hand-in-hand with the build-up of the challenger goes the business of finding the chinks in the champ's armor. And Louis is a natural for that kind of business. Because there is nothing consistent about his training. On any given occasion he is liable to perform like a stumblebum against his sparmates and send the camp correspondents into a furious race for the wires to record the fact.

* * * *

And for this fight, against Farr, they will probably ring in that old note, too, about the Britisher having the psychological advantage. They're too smart at the business to overlook that possibility. And so it is that you'll be told any day now that it is a different Joe Louis who will be making the first defense of his title.

* * * *

Louis, they will say, is no longer a hungry fighter—hungry for that title. The title he has, and that makes a differtnce, they will point out. The spark of his ambitions as a challenger may be very much missing on the night of August 26, the tom-tom beaters will hint, and in that case, of course, he may be a soft touch for the Britisher.

* * * *

Farr, on the inevitable other hand, will have the incentive that Louis lacks—the incentive to win the title and redeem for England the awful history of swooning British heavyweights. You may be sure that that point will not be overlooked. Each succeeding British heavyweight always is cast in that role.

* * * *

There isn't a chance, either, that you will escape being told about how Farr is perfecting a murderous right hand for the Louis fight. He may never have hit anybody on the chin with a right before in all his born days, but for this fight he must have a murderous right and the ballyhooeys will give it to him.

* * * *

That right hand which they will bestow on Farr is important, you see. If the build-up of the Britisher is to be complete, it must include a right-hand punch. Max Schmeling proved that Louis could be knocked out by a right and, if necessary, Mike Jacobs' publicity staff will graft one onto Farr's shoulder to last at least until he climbs into the ring.

66 Best Ball By Douglas And Oliver

Pair Wins Pro-Amateur; Walper and Brownell Top D. C. Groups.

By Merrell Whittlesey.
A Staff Correspondent.

Lancaster, Pa., Aug. 16.—Eddie Oliver, Wilmington, Del., professional, and his 19-year-old partner of Glendale, Pa., David Douglas, scored a best ball of 66 strokes here today over the Rolling Lancaster Country Club course to win the annual invitation pro-amateur event from a field of 110 that included 2 members of the victorious Ryder Cup Team, Byron Nelson, from nearby Reading, and Big Ed Dudley, Philadelphia.

Playing the outgoing nine on 35 strokes, one under regulation figures as both scored birdies on the eighth, the winning duo scorched the back nine in five under par, Oliver making three birdies and his partner two. The latter, central Pennsylvania open champion last year, three-putted the final green for a 65.

Ed Dudley, started poorly with bogey 5s on the first two holes, but played the last 16 in five under par, including an eagle on the par 5 finishing hole to win the pro sweepstakes with a 69, three under par, and paired with his partner, Hogo Rutherford, of Dudley's winter course, in Atlanta, Ga., to finish second in the pro-amateur with 67.

Bickey-Bradley Third.

Ted Bickel, pro, and his amateur partner, George Bradley, of Beverly Hills course in Philadelphia, finished third in the pro-amateur with a 69 best ball, a stroke ahead of Shorty Ondruch and his simon-pure mate, John Krex, of Philadelphia.

Leo Walper, unattached driving range professional from Washington and Bobby Brownell, District amateur champion, led the District entries with a best ball of 71, including birdies on the last two holes while tied for sixth place was Mel Shorey, East Potomac, and Volney Burnett, with a par on every hole for a 72. Clarence Hackney, jr., and sr., also tied at 72 figures.

Dudley played spectacular golf after straying tee shots cost him strokes to par on the first two holes. He holed a 60-footer for a 3 on the fifth hole and was back to par at the ninth with a birdie four, on in two and as many putts.

He snared a duece on the thirteenth hole with a 4-foot putt and concluded the round with his eagle after his second shot left him but 20 feet from the pin. He missed four putts of 4 feet and under en route.

The 6,550-yard Lancaster course, one of the toughest layouts in this section of the country, proved a tartar to the Washington pros and amateurs and only Walper was able to get in the money. His fifth place victory with Brownell netted the Middle Atlantic D. G. A. champion $20. Roland MacKenzie and Roger Peacock, of Congressional, defending champions, were far down the list with 73s.

Oliver's win was worth $100 to the Delaware mentor while Dudley received $75, Bickel, $50, and and Ondruch, $30. Amateur prizes were donated by the club. Dudley's pro sweeps victory netted him an additional $25 with Clarence Hackney and Oliver splitting a like

Dykes Signed As Chisox Pilot For 2 Seasons

Terms of Contract Are Not Disclosed; Has Good Record at Post.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—Chubby little Jimmy Dykes, who brought the Chicago White Sox from nowhere in 1935 to third place in 1936 and now has the club battling for second place in the American League, signed today to manage the team again in 1938 and 1939.

Owner Lou Comiskey announced the signing of the little Irishman without fanfare. He simply called "Uncle Jimmy" into his office, offered terms which were satisfactory but undisclosed, and Jimmy put his name on the line.

"I like it here fine," beamed Dykes a few hours later. "Next season we'll have another hustling club. We have good pitching, and will try to get a catcher, a good outfielder and a third baseman and maybe we'll go places. Right now we are aiming at second place."

Dykes, who will be 41 years old in November, is the dean of all American League infielders. Once one of the best third pickers in the business, his legs have gone back on him and he has appeared in only 15 games, but in those tilts belted the ball at a .343 clip. In the first game he started this season, against Detroit, he hit "four for four."

Dykes came to Chicago in 1933 in a $100,000 deal which also brought Mule Haas and Al Simmons to the Sox. Haas still is with Dykes, but Simmons was sold to Detroit for a reported $75,000 and now is with Washington. Dykes took over the team management May 8, 1934, from Lou Fonseca, and the team finished eighth. In 1935 it finished sixth, and since then has been a big factor in the American League race.

The Sox pilot is extremely popular with his players and the fans. In his twentieth major league season, he goes in to pinch hit in "spot" situations and comes through regularly. His family, he said, would continue to spend the winters in the East and visit him in Chicago during the summer season.

Stiff Matches Given Riggs And Parker

Youngsters Winners at Newport; Mangin Is Upset by Nippon.

Associated Press Sports Writer

Newport, R. I., Aug. 16.—Fifth seeded Gregory Mangin, Newark, N. J., veteran, lost a second-round match to the unranked Fumituru Nakano, of Japan, 6—8, 3—6, 6—1, in today's opening of the fifty-seventh Newport Casino tennis tournament before a small but select gallery lured to these historic courts to watch Don Budge, champion of champions.

Frankie Parker, only member of the triumphant American Davis Cup team who played today, had a bit of trouble with Ramsay Potts, of Memphis, Tenn., before he gained the second round with an 8—6, 6—1 victory.

Budge and his Davis Cup doubles partner, Gene Mako, postponed their arrival for 24 hours. The fourth Davis Cup player, Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, was forced to mark time because of other absentees.

The foreign list suffered a single dent when Clarence M. Jones, of England, its No. 5, dropped a 9—7, 6—2 first rounder to William T. Tilden 3d, of Philadelphia. That rangy namesake-nephew of the great Big Bill then moved against Gilbert Hunt, of Washington, and was overwhelmed, 6—2, 6—2.

Riggs Is Pressed.

Four other seeded domestic stars, including Bobby Riggs, 19-year-old California sensation of the Eastern turf season and last year's Casino winner, qualified for the third round. Riggs, whose only start was against Modest Alloo, of Berkeley, Calif., in the second round, displayed little of his great form while out-steadying his opponent for a 6—4, 2—6, 7—5 victory.

John Van Ryn, of Austin, Tex., seeded sixth, got off slowly against Martyn Buxby, of Miami, but he wound up with a 4—6, 6—2, 6—2 victory and then gained the third round by beating Robert Curtiss, of Chicago, 6—4, 6—2.

John McDiarmid, of Princeton, N. J., and Charles Harris, of West Palm Beach, the seventh and last seeded stars, drew first-round byes and then moved into the third round without great effort. McDiarmid eliminated David O' Laughlin, of Pittsburgh, 6—4, 6—0, and Harris accounted for James W. Gerard, of New York, 6—3, 6—3.

All of America's first 10 were in the brilliant international field of 93, and the last member of that select group, Art Hendrix, of Lakeland, Fla., was the first-round victim of Norman Bickell, of Chicago, 4—6, 6—4, 6—2.

Joe Hunt Winner.

Joe Hunt, of Los Angeles, who ranks ninth nationally, put together two easy wins to gain one of the 25 third-round brackets that were assigned during the first day's play. He opened with a love victory over Joe Werner, of Philadelphia, and then overcame Louis B. Dailey, of New York, 6—2, 6—1.

Charles Hare, the British Davis Cupper, and Jiro Yamagishi, the Japanese champion, were the outstanding foreigners. The Englishman did not lose a game as he swept through a second-rounder against Casper Nannes, the Brooklyn veteran, and Yamagishi defeated McClure Howland, of Jersey City, 6—1, 6—1, before ousting G. T. M. Zarifi, of England, 6—2, 6—1.

The British suffered another setback when M. D. Delaford was overcome by Bobby Harman of Berkeley, Calif., 6—2, 7—5, after he had moved out of the first round by defeating Donald Martin, of Newport, 6—1, 6—3.

Washington's two entries in the Newport Casino play emerged victorious from their first round matches. Barney Welsh defeated Donald Hawley, Orange, N. J., 6—4, 3—6, 10—8, while Gilbert Hunt was eliminating Arnold W. Jones, Providence, R. I., 6—2, 6—3.

Mrs. Wingard Sets Record In $2,000 Half-Mile Swim

Former Lenore Kight Paddles Distance in 12:09; Martha Norelius Second in 'Birthday' Race; Winner Takes $1,000 Prize at Cleveland.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Aug. 16.—Sun-bronzed Lenore Knight Wingard added the world's professional open-water half-mile pool record.

Swimming the first match in open water, the Homestead, Pa., girl splashed in some ten lengths ahead of Martha Norelius to lead a field of 17 in Lake Erie's ripples.

Her time for the half-mile course from the Cleveland Harbor breakwater to the shores of the Great Lakes exposition was 12 minutes, 9 seconds. There was no previous open water record. Mrs. Wingard's Lakes Exposition was 12 minutes, 34 4-10 seconds.

"I was more tired than if I had swum the same distance three times in a pool," she said after her fight against the far from placid waters. The waves were rippling but not choppy.

The White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., girl's second-place time was 12:22. They far outdistanced the remainder of the field. Miss Norelius formerly held the half-mile record.

There was one false start, then the race for $2,000 from the purse of Publisher Bernarr Macfadden, celebrating his sixty-ninth birthday, settled down to a grind. Mrs. Wingard won $1,000 as first prize, and Miss Norelius a $500 award.

The remaining $500 was split between the lower places. In third place was Mae Looney, of Toronto, a finisher in the 3½-mile race there last year. Her time was 13:14.

Susan Robertson, the former national mile champion from Seabright, N. J., took fourth, and Flo Southard, of Buffalo, was fifth. In her first professional race, Rose Nemecek, of Detroit, former amateur national junior titleholder at the half-mile, was sixth.

QUAILL GETS DECISION.

Pittsburgh, (AP).—Al Quaill, 160, veteran Pittsburgh middleweight, absorbed eight rounds of battering tonight, then rallied sharply to gain a split decision over Jimmy Clark, of Jamestown, N. Y., 162½, in their ten-round battle, headliner of a boxing card.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., (AP).—Yearling sales hit a new low for the season tonight when 43 head sold for only $24,625, and average of $573. Despite tonight's low total the buyers have paid $1,233,825 for 494 youngsters thus far with an average of just $2,500 per head.

Puerto Rican Saved By Bell in Opener

Unable to Resume One-Sided Bout After Coast Boy Flattens Him With Right to Jaw; Outcome Never in Doubt.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Henry Armstrong, the short and surly socker from Los Angeles, put reverse English on Al Jolson's "Mammy" last night at Griffith Stadium where he made Johnny Cabello say "Uncle," after one round of furious pitching and catching.

Cabello didn't say "Uncle," for the simple reason that he couldn't. He was nodding and continually slipping off his stool despite the feverish attention of his seconds, at the end of that first round. Two rights that travelled about the length of a whisker finished his business for the night. They finished Henry's too, for the brusque little bruiser seemed in a hurry to get out of there.

A crowd of more than 5,000 fans that shelled out approximately $6,500 dollars witnessed the fiasco. It was a brief and, for the fans, expensive bit of entertainment—if Cabello wants to call himself an entertainer—but none seemed to begrudge the price they paid. It was well worth it to see the sepia sharpshooter toss his poisonous darts at the uncertain Puerto Rican.

One round, but one packed with action, mostly on Armstrong's part, was plenty. Twice Cabello lay prone on the carpet, the first time just stunned and shaken up a bit. But the second, interrupted by the bell's timely clanging, he was stretched out cold as frozen mackerel. He didn't regain consciousness for several minutes, and the bell announcing the start of the second round had rung long ago and its echo long since lost in the crowd's roar of approval at Armstrong's prowess.

Armstrong waded into Cabello, his second opponent in four nights, with regal disdain for his opponent's punching power and promptly planted two rib-bending rights under the heart. Cabello winced, but tried to make a fight of it. He had clubbed Armstrong with a looping left, first blow of the brief bout, but was absolutely impotent after that.

Armstrong backed him up against the ropes, burried his head on Cabello's chest, and clipped him with a whistling right to the button. It was not a solid blow, but torpid enough to put him down for a nine-count. Cabello was not in bad shape, just saken up and forewarned of his ultimate doom.

He pawed feebly at Armstrong with his left and tried to whack him with a right, but Henry took the former on his shoulder, and caught the right on elbow, replying with two stiff blows to the brisket. The second was a right under the heart that staggered Cabellero. The Puerto Rican tried to clinch, but Armstrong backed him into the ropes and let fly with a haymaker that exploded on his jaw with terrific force, and Cabellero collapsed like Henry's 13 previous opponents.

Kid Howie launched the evening's festivities by winning over Johnny Jones on a second round technical knockout. The end came 1:15 after the start and with Jones reclining on the canvas for the second time.

Baby Manuael's punishing attack to the body and person of Bobby Dechter, an overstuffed featherweight, accounted for the second kayo. Dechter, after accepting the match on one day's notice, fought a game but impotent battle and was floored for the full count after 2:05 of the third. He was down for nine once before the finish.

Mike Morton, a local boy who made good for Columbus University and the Merrick Boys Club, got up off the floor twice to get a well-deserved draw with an old amateur opponent, Brooks Bowen, of Richmod. It was Mike's first professional fight and a gory duel fought at an extremely swift pace.

Morton got tagged with a right the first time he bounced on the floor, and carelessly walked into a looping left for his second unscheduled sit-down of the evening. Mike's gallant rally, featuring a punishing barrage of blows to the tummy was responsible for the decision.

John Henry, a mauler who was more than mildly surprised when credited to New York City, drew with Johnny Johnson, of Philadelphia, in a vigorous, but not so entertaining six-round exhibition. Henry was penalized frequently for low blows, but still tossed enough punches to get an even break.

Wild Bill Howell, a little short on technique, but long on courage, went down fighting before the two-fisted onslaught of "Spike" Miller, an Ada, Okla., importation, but it was a great battle while it lasted.

Living up to his name, Howell started blindly after his foe in the first round, evidently preparing to give him a sound thrashing. But Miller pulled a right from somewhere, laid it on Howell's chin, and Bill lay on the canvas. He was up at nine, however, and stayed the round.

Two Junior Net Matches To Johnsen

No. 1 Player Is Ahead of Field in Play for District Crown.

Davie Johnsen, the "patent leather kid" of local tennis, seeded No. 1, romped through his second and third round matches yesterday to gain the quarterfinal round and a one-round jump on the field in the District of Columbia Junior Tennis Championship at the Army-Navy Country Club.

After Johnsen had defeated Harry Durst, 6—0, 6—1, in the second round match, he proceeded to eliminate Hamilton Bonham, 6—0, 6—3, to become the first player to enter the quarterfinal round. Meanwhile, Marvin Carlott, seeded just behind the Roosevelt High School star, was moving into the third round by defeating Ralph Quevado, 6—2, 6—0.

The California entry is scheduled to play his third round match against Eddie Smith at 10 a. m. today. Michael Nunez, seeded No. 7, became the only victim of an upset when he bowed out of the tourney at the hands of Jim Hardey, unseeded entry, after he had reached the second round by default.

Four Records To Speedboats In New Jersey

Trial Marks Fall; Cooper Again Star of Day's Nautical Program.

Redbank, N. J., Aug. 16.—The North Shrewsbury lived up to its reputation as one of the fastest motorboat raceways in the world today when 4-mile trial records were establisshed at the National Sweepstakes Regatta.

The new standards brought to an even dozen the number created during the three-day marine carnival staged under ideal conditions.

For Jack Cooper, 57-year-old victor in the classic 225 and sweepstakes events, it was another day of triumph. The Kansas City, Mo., veteran thundered his Lycoming-powered Tops II, down the measured mile course at a rate o 73.171 miles an hour to erase his own mark of 70.593 set last March at Miami.

Sandlot Pick-ups

By Jack Munhall.

After brief observation one is compelled to admit that the union printers are a very well organized and happy group . . . Here in Washington are gathered some 500 of the typos for the "World Series" of the sandlots . . . The twenty-seventh annual International Union Printer baseball tournament in progress now is the oldest sandlot league now in existence . . . Others were founded before, but none has survived through the depression, the war and other difficulties which the printers waded through to a stronger union than ever before . . . And now after a lapse of 11 years the local union is receiving once again representatives from all parts of the country with a cordiality and friendship noted among the organization . . .

There hasn't been a dull moment since the teams began arriving from Baltimore, New York, St. Paul, Detroit, Pittsburgh, Chicago, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Boston and St. Louis . . . There are dinner-dances in the evening, sightseeing and other amusements in the afternoon and in the mornings the boys engage in the series play.

Yesterday at Griffith Stadium in the game between Indianapolis and Detroit, spontaneous rooting and enthusiasm seldom witnessed was displayed by a small group which made up in noise what it lacked in quantity . . . And the teams responded to this wholehearted encouragement with an exhibition of baseball fitting to the major league diamond upon which they played . . . The only thrill the game failed to produce was a home run . . . There was real hitting supplied by Ludwig, of Indianapolis, who hit a steaming drive against the rightfield wall for a double and by Pitcher N. Seddon, of Detroit, who lashed a triple to deep center.

In the third inning that daring and always popular steal of home was offered . . . With one out and Indianapolis at bat, Wellman and N. Seddon worked the steal . . . Wellman scored from second . . . For drama the eighth-inning rally staged by Detroit to capture the clash, 6-5, was the goods . . . There were two outs when the fireworks started . . . And in the end it was an error by a hard-fighting, overanxious shortstop that allowed the winning run to trickle across the plate . . .

WITSON was slightly reserved while racing well placed, moved up on the inside of BANK HOLIDAY and, in a drive through the stretch, outlasted the latter at the end. BANK HOLIDAY, in the forefront throughout, gained a short lead nearing the stretch and, responding gamely to urging, just failed to last. PALM ISLAND, away slowly, went into contention with a rush and although easing willingly was unable to endanger the first two.

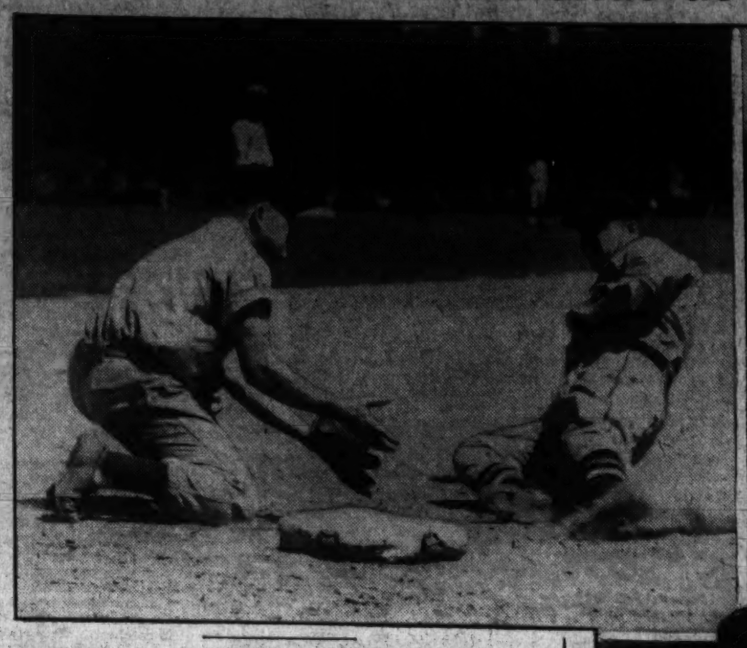
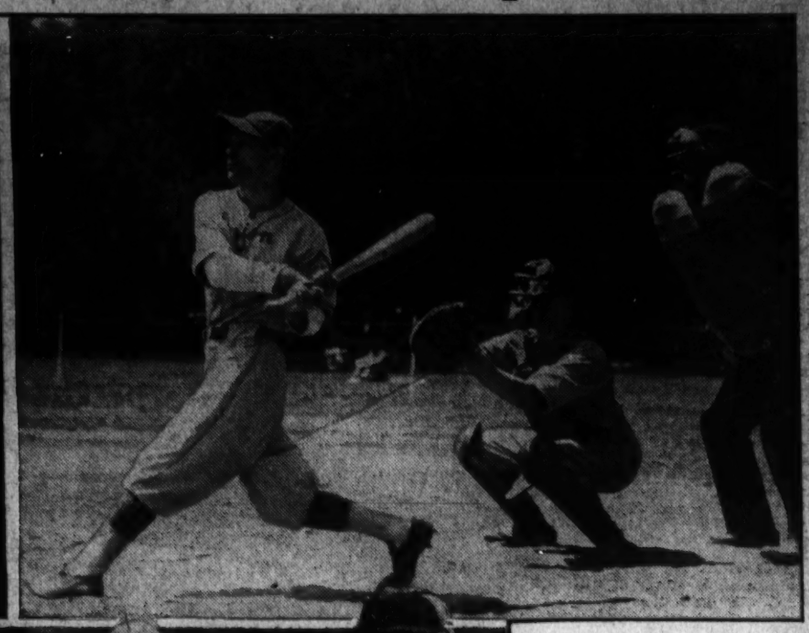
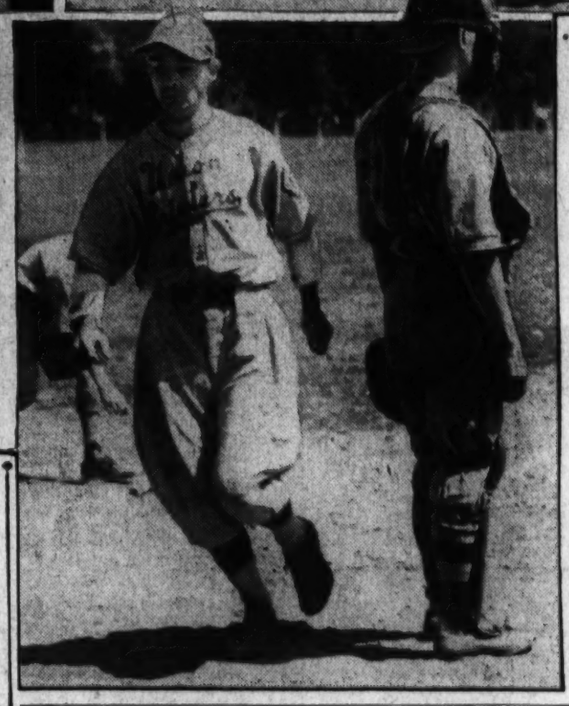
Action on Four Diamonds as Printers' Baseball Tourney Takes Over Local Sports Scene







Post Staff Photos by Charles Del Vichhio.

Upper left—George Kucher, of Chicago, slides safely into third base on Schmitt's single in the third inning of the game with St. Louis. Mike Skrimmer is the third baseman. Chicago, defending champion, won the contest, 13 to 6, but was denied it for use of an ineligible player.

Center—Tommy (Tuck) Dalgish, of Washington, is safe at home in a veritable duststorm. The play happened in the eighth inning of the locals' game with Boston which they won, 14 to 4. Phil Santo, catcher, is showing the pained expression.

Upper right—Oops! Watch out! George Schraber, of the slugging Baltimore nine, is shown at the completion of a prodigious swing that planted the ball for a terrific home run with the bases loaded in the second inning. Baltimore nosed out Pittsburgh, 29 to 2, in this game.

Lower left—Joe Licato, of New York, is safe at home in a photo finish in the eighth frame of the New York-Twin Cities fuss which the former took, 9 to 6. Catcher Bill Scleik engineered the putout.

Lower right—George Schraber exhibits a dead pan, a la Joe DiMaggio, as he crossed home plate after his base-clearing circuit smash.

Washington Printers Trounce Boston, 14-4

Mosedale Hurls Good Game and Bats Strong to Win; Chicago Loses to St. Louis in Protested Contest; Baltimore Victor.

By Jack Munhall.

Washington and Chicago, favorites, took opposite paths yesterday as the locals hurdled their first round test while the Windy City nine was being declared the loser after having defeated the St. Louis entry with the aid of an ineligible player as the twenty-seventh annual International Union Printers Baseball Tournament opened on five Capital fronts.

The District team trounced the heralded Boston nine, 14-4, as George Mosedale pitched and contributed heavy hitting support to the victory. Chicago, defending champion and a slight pre-tournament favorite to repeat, was denied the victory it registered over the St. Louis team, 13-6, by a special meeting of the committee last night.

Citing the use of Pitcher Mullins, who entered the game in the third inning, as a violation of the rules which state that a player shall have served two years as an apprentice, the St. Louis team filed a complaint stating that Mullins had not served the required length of time. He had thrown but one ball when the protest was lodged and he was immediately removed, but the committee voted 10 to 4 to award the game to St. Louis.

In other games Baltimore showed amazing hitting strength in scuttling Pittsburgh, 29-2, in a contest halted by agreement after the completed sixth frame; Detroit nipped Indianapolis, 6-4, by dint of a 3-run surge in the eighth, and Twin Cities scored three times in a futile ninth-inning rally before bowing to New York's entry by the score of 9-6.

Washington, already a heavily backed choice to win should Chicago falter, boosted its stock as Mosedale exhibited excellent form. The big right-hander set Boston down with 12 well-scattered blows and fanned a like number while untouchable in the pinches. He also led the 16-hit assault with four safeties, including a home run, in five attempts. Phil Boundford and Manager Ray Homan contributed batting support with three singles in five trips.

George Schraber furnished a dramatic touch to the Baltimore-Pittsburgh clash when he blasted a terrific homer with the bases crammed in the second inning. It was the blow that ignited the slumbering dynamite in the Smoky City boys' bats.

Indianapolis and Detroit showed appreciation at playing on the big league diamond at Griffith Stadium by staging the best-played game of the day.

The teams fielded cleanly on the whole, the batting was sharp and the pitching both good and bad.

Detroit, trailing 4-3 going into the last half of the eighth, came up with a stirring three-run outburst after two men had been retired. Catcher Eagan inauspiciously opened the rally with a single to center, but the thing appeared to harmlessly subside when, after Eagan had been sacrificed to second by St. John, Guntenaar flyed out to left.

But then Martin breathed life into the proceedings with a nice poke into center for a single which scored Eagan with the tying run. Then Pitcher Tinsgal helped his own interests along with a single to center and the bases were loaded a moment later when Numbers secured a cheap single.

Then all of a sudden fate took a hand, with Shortstop Bredl committing an error on an easy roller of Dodt's, and Martin scampered across the plate with the winning run.

Kiefer Swims To Record in Meet at Tokyo

Katherine Rawls Is Among Winners; Medica 7th in Free Style Race.

Tokio, Aug. 16.—Adolf Kiefer, of Chicago, tonight won the 100-meter back-stroke final in a United States-Japan swimming meet, setting a foreigners' record of 1:7 and clipping two-tenths of a second off the mark set by Masaji Kiyokawa, who placed third behind him in the Olympic final last year.

Kiefer finished with a 5-meter lead over Japanese Olympians, Kiichi Yoshida and Yasumiko Kojima.

Katherine Rawls, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., won the women's 100-meter back stroke in 1:24.2, while Johnny Higgins, of Columbus, Ohio, United States breast-stroke titleholder, placed sixth and last in the 200-meter final, won by Olympic Champion Detsuo Hamuro, in 2:40.4. Reizo Koike was second, in 2:44.4.

Jack Medica, of Seattle, swam sluggishly in the 1,500-meter free style to place seventh in the field of nine led by Hiroshi Takahashi, 19-year-old Keio University student, in 37:8.

Coach Brauninger of the United States squad said he was satisfied with the outcome of the meet.

Barbara Winslow Victor, 6-2, 8-5; Poor Field in Essex Event.

By the Associated Press.

Manchester, Mass., Aug. 16.—Kay Winthrop and Virginia Rice Johnson, both of Boston, led a parade of favorites through first-round play at the Essex County Club's annual Women's Invitation Tennis Tournament today, but last-minute withdrawals robbed the affair of some of its strongest players.

The withdrawals included Miss Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, of Poland, Wimbledon champion, who has defeated Miss Alice Marble, National titleholder, four out of five matches this year; Mrs. Tokuko Nakano, Japanese champion; Miss Anita Lizana, Chilean titleholder, and Gracyn Wheeler, of Santa Monica, Calif., the Nation's fourth ranking player.

They withdrew to "rest" for the national doubles championships next week.

Several other American and British internationalists, perennial performers here, were absent because of the Wightman Cup matches in New York this week.

Miss Winthrop conquered Virginia Hollinger, Dayton, Ohio, 8—6, 6—3, while Mrs. Johnson scored over Mary Cootes, of Baltimore, 6—2, 6—3.

Four Californians survived the first day's play—Jane Stanton, of Los Angeles, who beat Polly Morrill, Dedham, 7—5, 6—1; Eleanor Dawson, Piedmont, who conquered Eunice Dean, San Antonio, Texas., 6—3, 4—6, 6—3; Patricia Henry, Los Angeles, who scored over Florence LeBoutillier, New York, 6—1, 6—2, and Barbara Winslow, Hollywood, who turned back Edith Clark, Washington, D. Single Upset Marks Parks Tennis Start

Hawaiians Play in Bare Feet; Bo Ming Yee Loses, 8-6, 6-2, 6-2.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 16.—Half a hundred tanned young athletes from the far corners of the Nation battled through the first round of men's singles in the fifteenth annual national public parks tennis championships today with but one casualty among the seeded favorites.

Bo Ming Yee, seeded eighth, capped a 5,000-mile journey from the fairy-book shores of Honolulu by losing to Bob Patterson, of Tulsa, Okla., in straight sets, 8—6, 6—2, 6—2.

Ronold Lubin, one of California's several top-flight contenders, climbed out of a plane this morning after a sleepless night and found the burning sun, strange clay courts and the strong backhand of Manhattan's Charles Thompson a severe hurdle, but survived 7—5, 6—3, 2—6, 6—3.

The black-haired Los Angeles star won the Grand National singles title Saturday.

Today's firing, spread over more than a dozen courts in the rural setting of Pittsburgh's 4,000-acre South Park, provided a wide variety of tennis.

Except for Lou Schaeffer, of Buffalo, who competed in the first parks championship at St. Louis in 1923, most of the players were youths of high school and college age.

Little Ed Bordin, Philadelphia's hard-luck guy, who has been beaten in the first round in two previous parks tourneys, overcame his jinx in the toughest match of the day. He battled past Paul Scherer, of Minneapolis, 5—7, 5—7, 6—4, 6—3, 6—1.

The Hawaiian contingent, true to its threat, played barefooted with mixed success. Tatsuo Todo was the only islander to win, downing Raymond Lyon, of Richmond, 6—2, 6—2, 6—2.

Defending Champion Lewis Wetherell was one of seven players who drew byes into tomorrow's second round. His match with Al Joseph, of Chicago, will start off the second day's program.

Nats Poised For Series In New York

Will Carry 8-Game Winning Streak Against Slumping Yanks.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

New York, Aug. 16.—In the strange role of American League sensations, the Nats were encamped here tonight and awaiting the morrow when they will carry an amazing eight-game winning streak onto the field against the Yankees tomorrow, in a doubleheader.

Commanding a new respect and fortified by the return of Al Simmons to his outfield post, the Nats will engage the Yankees at a time when the league-leading New Yorkers are in the throes of their worst slump of the season.

The onrushing Washington team, making a late-season bid for a first-division berth, will be meeting a slightly demoralized Yankee team which was slapped down in three straight games by the eighth-place Philadelphia Athletics.

Bucky Harris' Nats, who have won 17 of their last 25 games and achieved Washington's longest winning streak since 1933, have actually been playing at the fastest pace of any American League team during the past month. And the return of Simmons at this time is a welcome addition.

Lightly discounting the major league maxim that a winning combination should never be disturbed, Harris is eager to bench Freddie Sington and return Simmons to the club's outfield. Simmons has now fully recovered from a severely bruised ankle and Sington has been no important figure in the Nats' winning streak.

It was immediately following the loss of four straight games to the Nats that the Athletics bumped the Yankees in three straight, and that exhibition is encouraging the Nats as the New York series dawns.

Gallantly his ball club has rallied to the cause of Manager Harris, whose contract expires at the end of this season. With their pennant hopes long since doomed, the Nats are making a stirring comeback calculated to save Harris' managerial scalp.

Jimmy DeShong, always a Yankee baiter since he was traded to Washington two years ago, will get the pitching assignment in today's opening game of the twin bill. Pete Appleton will work the second gabe. Manager Joe McCarthy is expected to counter with Lefty Gomez, who has won three decisions in four tilts with the Nats this season, and Johnny Murphy.

The Washington Club is currently embarked on its longest road trip of the season—a 17-game junket that will carry the Nats into every city of the league with the exception of Philadelphia. After three games in New York, the Nats will play three games in Boston and then head for St. Louis where the tour of the West begins.

Iowa Sees Athletes Inferior Students

Iowa City, Aug. 16 (AP).—A 6-year-survey completed by the University of Iowa indicates athletes are inferior in their studies to non-athletic students.

The survey discloses that athletes do not strive any harder in their classwork to remain eligible.

Scorching Heat Damages Corn, Raises Prices

Advance of 3 Cents Follows Reports of Drought in Many Areas.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—Brisk buying and nearly 3 cents upturn of prices distinguished the corn market today following crop damage reports from widespread areas Southwest, West and Northwest. Scorching winds simultaneous with dearth of moisture were said to have done injury of 15 to 40 per cent to the corn crop in parts of Missouri, Nebraska, Iowa, South Dakota and Minnesota. Temperatures as high as 119 degrees were noted, setting a new record for August at various places.

Despite reactions due to profit-taking and to forecasts indicating likelihood of showers and of cooler temperatures, the corn market closed near the day's top level, ⅝ to 2¼ cents above Saturday's finish; September, 99@99⅛; December, 68¾@68½; May, 69⅝@69¾. Retail Store Sales 8% Over Last Year

Sales in retail stores during July totaled $3,000,000,000, a gain of 3 per cent over the sales volume of July, 1936, according to calculations made public yesterday by the American Retail Federation.

Total sales for the first seven months of this year amounted to about $22,500,000,000, an increase of 8 per cent, or $1,700,000,000 over the sales volume for the same period last year.

The American Retail Federation's provisional retail sales index, representing daily average sales for all kinds of retail stores combined, stood at 89 (1929-31 average equals 100) in July, the same as in July last year. The increased dollar volume is accounted for by the five Saturdays in July of this year and the extra selling day in some localities, gained by Fourth of July falling on Sunday.

Japanese Bond Break Here and in London

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—A tumble in Japanese loans in Wall street today echoed the Far Eastern clash of arms.

On heels of a decline in Chinese and Japanese issues in London, a wave of selling broke the resistance of the market here for loans of the Japanese government, the city of Tokyo and Japanese utility companies. Losses ranged from around $20 to nearly $50 per $1,000 face value of the bonds.

Court Halts Van Sweringen Merger Plan

Permanent Injunction Is Granted on Plea of Three Groups.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 16.—Chief Judge Samuel K. Dennis, sitting in a State court, today forbade a merger of the Alleghany and Cheshapeake corporations, key holding companies of the vast Van Sweringen railway system. He said the merger would be unfair to the holders of Class A preferred stock of the Alleghany Corporation.

He granted a permanent injunction against the adoption of the plan by the stockholders of the two holding corporations. The plan was proposed in July and was to have been acted upon tomorrow. The petition for an injunction was filed by Tri-Continental Corporation and Selected Industries, Inc. Later another petition was filed by Broseco Corporation and Aldebaran Corporation, bonth controlled by General Motors interests. The University of Pennsylvania was also a complainant in the suit, having entered the case after the first petition was filed.

Public Sentiment.

Judge Dennis, who ordered the Chesapeake and Alleghany corporations to pay the costs of the case, said in his opinion:

"It is manifest that there is a decided public and political sentiment against the Van Sweringen means and methods of getting corporate control of transportation companies, of which these two corporations are products and survivors.

"There are sound reasons for wanting to abandon such methods. Undoubtedly, savings of moment in taxes and otherwise can be accomplished by joining both corporations into one. Wherefore, it appears that excellent grounds exist for affecting the merger, if the substantial property rights of existing investors in both corporations, or the law, be not violated."

After citing the "interwoven" features of the scheme, he added: "The court feels bound to enjoin the defendants as prayed—not necessarily from holding the two stockholders' meetings—but from taking action looking to a vote by stockholders as either and both to pass upon or adopt the proposed consolidation agreement."

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—The Ball Foundation, which votes 1,200,000 shares of Alleghany Corporation common stock, has not yet sent in proxies in approval of the proposal for merger of Alleghany with Chesapeake Corporation, the other major holding company of the Van Sweringen Rail System, it was disclosed today. Meetings of stockholders of the two companies, set for tomorrow, will be postponed for at least 20 days, it was said.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Turn Downward, Led by Steels, in Dull Trading; U. S. Government Bonds Steady.

New York, Aug. 16.—For the first time since last Wednesday the stock market was blown back a little. Opening prices were mostly lower and no rallying power worth much could be developed. Leading issues ended with declines of 1 to 2 points. Turnover was less than 700,000 shares. Commodities were mixed. September wheat dropped ⅝ of a cent to $1.13⅜ a bushel. Government bonds were steady.

Trade news over the week-end was largely an official summary of the seasonal recession known to have been taking place last month. It turns out that copper stocks rose a little, that cotton consumption declined, that bank debits last week were lower, as were freight car loadings, that cotton exports fell in July (the fall being sharp compared with a year ago), that consumption of crude rubber in July was nearly 10 per cent under a year ago, and that some wage earners were "laid off" as an offset to higher wage scales.

This month signs are appearing of recovery, a trend which is expected to become more pronounced with the autumn. The fall in wheat and cotton prices naturally has led to a movement to stick hands into the Federal Treasury, but actually prices are far above production costs, and the larger outturn assures a high level of prosperity in the farming regions at least for the next several months.

Among industrial centers the trade revival has gone far, but its life is never indestructible. The country probably is close to a peak in business, until a considerable expansion can take place in foreign trade. That in turn needs a sounder currency system than any country now possesses and an end to economic dictatorships of one kind and another along with an end to the heavy fighting on both the European and Asiatic fronts. The chances still are in favor of an inflationary boom, springing from an unbalanced budget and sketchy fiscal policy, but until and unless that comes the present state of business must be considered good.

Steel Rate Declines.

In the steel industry the mills gradually are overtaking the backlog of orders, and the operating rate this week will fall to 83.2 per cent, according to the estimate of the American Iron & Steel Institute. Last week the rate was 84.6 per cent of capacity and a year ago it was 72.2 per cent. The decline perhaps may have encouraged profit-taking in United States and other steel stocks.

Railroads seemed indifferent to everything. In some quarters the attempt was made to regard bullishly the compromise with non-operating employes for a 5 per cent wage increase, which it was said would cost the roads "only" $100,000,000 a year. Cheerfulness over that must rest on the assumption that any blow which fails to put the remaining two-thirds of solvent lines immediately into bankruptcy is bullish. In the same manner the putting over of the 70-car train bill until next session of Congress was good news.

The first of the railroad earnings statements for July is overdue. Last month the freight car loadings ran 6.7 per cent ahead of the same month of last year, but maintenance expenditures have been up lately, and it is possible that net operating railway income will show little if any gain over last year. Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific and a few other rails lost as much as a point.

Seldom Sell.

The dullness of the market was the most marked in more than a year for the many stocks. General Electric, for example, a leader for the past few weeks had only two transactions before noon and seldom appeared on the ticker tape in the later trading. Radio ran into an obstruction, although it continued active. Mining shares lost 1 to 2 points, and they looked to be anything but a war market.

Steel Operations Dip to 83.2 Per Cent

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week declined 1.4 points to 83.2 per cent of capacity, compared with 84.6 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

A month ago operations averaged 82.5 per cent of capacity while a year ago the rate was 72.2 per cent.

On the home front, the maneuvers in the Black affair at Washington are serving to postpone some of the worst New Deal issues, although the proposed court appointment in itself looks worse as the record is revealed. For the remainder of this year the markets and business now seem in fair way of having a breathing spell on the wage-hour bill, the crop dole-control plan and other matters of that nature.

An offset to an early adjournment of Congress is the harm which is being done to the efforts to expand foreign trade by the Chinese affair. In North China at least the preferred positions of this country and Europe might as well be regarded as gone forever. In addition to forcing the movement of goods toward Japan, the Japanese are working to a currency climax which will entail an inflationary depreciation.

Banking Position.

Comptroller of the Currency O'Conner refers to banks in the "continental United States" and other island parts "of the United States." What State of the United States is not on the North American continent? . . . The Comptroller's summary of condition of the national banks on the call dates—June 30 and March 31, 1937, and June 30, 1936—show an interesting change in the banking position. The long march in deposits seems to have halted. Total deposits of the national banking system (with fewer banks open) were $26,765,000,000 at the end of June, which amount was a quarter of a million above that on March 31 but was nearly a billion under the total at the end of last year. Meanwhile the banks also have ceased to add to their investments in United States Government obligations. The holdings of $8,219,000,000 were slightly higher than those for March 31, but were nearly $230,000,000 down from June 30 of last year.

Potential Spending.

The figures covering national banks alone give some idea of the pressing problem of the national debt, for it would be impossible for the banks to sell in a short time any appreciable amount of their Government investments. They are virtually frozen for the banks as a whole and also give a fictitious picture of the real condition of the Government's credit. The high deposit total gives some inkling of what could happen once the deposits (simply money lying idle in the banks, except insofar as the Government, which has borrowed some of them, is spending the money, and also excepting the comparatively small total of bank loans) go to work in earnest and gain velocity.

A. I. B.'s Radio Exercises Are Set for Sept. 10

Branch Rickey, St. Louis Baseball Club Owner, to Be Chief Speaker.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

This year's annual radio commencement exercises of the American Institute of Banking will be broadcast over the nation-wide Blue Network of the National Broadcasting System on Friday evening, September 10, from 8:30 until 9 o'clock, Eastern standard time. This announcement is made by Miss Catherine M. Krieg, Riggs National Bank, member of the institute's radio commencement committee.

The speaker will be Branch Rickey, vice president and general manager of the St. Louis National League Cardinal baseball team. Mr. Rickey, a lawyer, lecturer and prominent citizen of St. Louis, is widely known not only as a sportsman but as a philanthropist. He is an inspirational speaker of the type of the late Knute Rockne. He has chosen as his subject "The Score Board."

The program will emanate from St. Louis, and Mr. Rickey will be introduced to the radio audience by Dr. Harold Stonier, educational director of the American Institute of Banking. These annual radio commencement exercises of the institute are of great interest to members of the banking profession throughout the country, and serve as a tie-in with the commencement exercises of the institute chapters which are held all over the nation in conjunction with the radio program.

In past radio commencement exercises the guest speakers have been such men as Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War in President Wilson's Cabinet and an internationally known lawyer; J. F. T. O'Connor, now Comptroller of the Currency of the United States, while last year's institute radio commencement audience were addressed by Joseph A. Broderick, member of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, and an alumnus of the American Institute of Banking.

Smith's 25 Years Old.

Smith's Transfer & Storage Co., Inc., is now 25 years old and the story of the firm's successful history is told in an interesting pamphlet entitled, "A Quarter Century of Progress." President Arthur Clarendon Smith, of the organization, states, "The year 1937 is a quarter of a century of progress for Smith's Transfer & Storage Co., and we are glad to report that our semiannual statement shows a larger volume of business in all lines of our organization. We showed the largest profit for the same period of time in our history. From a small beginning over 25 years ago, with capital of $500, we have branched out to be one of the largest organizations of this kind in the Nation's Capital."

Earl D. Krewson, local agency director, New York Life Insurance Co., reports he has just been notified by the home office that David Samokow, of the local agency, stood thirty-second in volume of new paid for business for the first six months of 1937, among the entire force of 9,369 agents in United States and Canada.

Auto Registrations.

There were 3,304 registrations of new passenger automobiles reported for the District of Columbia in June, as compared with 4,014 in June a year ago, a decline of 17 per cent. Registrations for the first half of 1937 aggregated 16,719, as against 18,382 for the corresponding period last year, a recession of 9 per cent. In the entire local Federal Reserve

Ayres Predicts Active Business Rest of Year

But New Funds Lag Behind Expansion, Banker Says.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Aug. 16.—From Col. Leonard P. Ayres came the prediction today that "business activity will hold up well during the remaining months of the year." For the first six months, industrial production "has exceeded that of the same months of 1936 by 19 per cent," the economist said in the monthly business bulletin of the Cleveland Trust Co., of which he is a vice president.

"Factory employment has been greater by 14 per cent, and factory pay rolls have been 29 per cent larger than those of the corresponding months of 1936," Col. Ayres said.

"The agricultural outlook remains favorable. Business sentiment has become much more optimistic as a result of developments in Washington, the recent decreases in labor difficulties, and of advances that have been under way during the past weeks in the security markets."

Cites Drawback.

On the other hand, Col. Ayres said "one fundamental element in the business situation is much less favorable. It is the fact that the flow of new funds into business enterprises is not increasing in proportion to the expansion of production and trade.

"Sales of new corporation securities have been running so far this year at rates not much over one-third of the average maintained in the 10 years just before the depression."

"The widely anticipated summer slump in business activity is not developing. Not many new records are being made, but in nearly all important lines of production and trade the July figures of this year have been well above those of July, 1936.

"This is true even in steel production where output has been seriously restricted by strikes, and in automobiles where work on new models is now cutting down the number of assemblies. In the third week of July the production of electric power reached a record above any previous level attained in the history of the industry."

Dr. Paiva Sworn As President Of Paraguay

New Head Promises Return to 'Normality' Within Six Months.

By the United Press.

Ascuncion, Paraguay, Aug. 16.—Paraguay's totalitarian state, set up by Col. Rafael Franco 18 months ago, collapsed today when Dr. Felix Paiva, an old-line politician of the Dissident Liberal Party group, took the oath of office to succeed Franco as provisional president.

Paiva, backed by the army and navy group headed by Lieut. Col. Ramon L. Paredes which forced Franco's resignation yesterday, pledged the "armed forced and the people" to return the country to "institutional normality" within six months and to support the constitution of 1870.

The Franco regime planned to scrap that constitution and draft a new one. The ousted government also barred participation in the government of any but those groups associated with the revolution of February 17, 1936, which overthrew President Eusebio Ayala.

Paiva's pledge of "institutional normality" was interpreted to mean that legitimate political parties would be permitted to reorganize and take part in general elections. Franco banned all political activities and deported most of the leaders of the Liberal Party as well as many of the Republican Party.

Busy Day for Life-Savers.

Brest, France, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—The Port Sail life-saving crew was being decorated today for heroism in its rescue of the crew of a fishing boat, when word came that another boat had struck a reef. The crew rushed into the sea, saved one man while two drowned and returned to finish the ceremony.

Econum 'Murder' Is Natural Death

A certificate of natural causes was issued yesterday by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald in the death of Anthanasius Econom, 48-year-old WPA writer, originally believed to have been murdered behind the State Department Building three weeks ago.

Econom was found dead, lying on the grass, about 10 p. m. Several suspects were arrested after witnesses testified hearing the sound of a blow, followed by groans and people running away from the scene.

An examination of the dead man's brain, however, showed he died of natural causes, the coroner reported yesterday. The suspects were charged with robbery.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

A sharp advance in the Shanghai dollar marked foreign exchange dealings yesterday. It was suggested the unit might be supported by gold balances in New York.

The Shanghai dollar jumped .19 of a cent to be quoted at one time at 30.13 cents. Traders said the rise was on extremely light dealings. The pound sterling declined ¼ of a cent to $4.98¼, while the French franc lost .00⅛ of a cent to be quoted at 3.75⅛ cents. The Netherlands guilder was unchanged.

In London the dollar gained ⅛ of a cent to close at 4.98⅛ to the pound, compared with a sterling rate of $4.98⅛ in New York on Saturday. French francs were unchanged at 132.81 to the pound.

Paris markets were closed due to the Ascension Day holiday.

The "Going Native" cast, at the Capitol this week, will be heard in "Radio Joe's" period, WMAL, at 6:30. Gordon Hittenmark presents among others, Jimmy Mulroe and Dick Leslie, singing "Hittenmark, Godfrey and Brown," a tune by Gene Ford.

* * * *

Josef Cherniavsky is featured in the "Music By—" series from WOL at 7. The highlight will be "The Squirrel Fantasy," a novelty arrangement of popular melodies as they would be played by a mentally unbalanced orchestra.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

Late dealings in today's stock market were featureless, the Far East situation overshadowing all favorable developments and traders were reluctant to take on new commitments. With bids support lacking prices showed an easier trend. Gilt-edged securities and foreign bonds, together with shipping shares, sold lower and the rail group was mixed. Transatlantic issues were firm exceptions, some of which closed higher. British Tobacco was in supply and iron, steel and oil stocks declined.

Paris—The bourse was closed in observance of Assumption Day.

Liverpool—Cotton futures sagged and closed 1¾d to 2¼d net lower on rumors of increased Russian offerings, rains in Australia and lower North American markets. Cotton futures lost 12 to 18 points, declining under Bombay selling, scattered realising and hedging. Uncertainties regarding the American cotton loan was attributed to the small volume of trading.

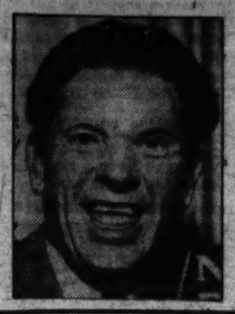
Bob Burns Says—



There's nothin' I admire more than a man who deals with the public and can handle situations diplomatically and keep everybody happy. That's what I liked about the Rev. Tweedle. He had the only church in his town and had to handle all kinds of people, but he treated 'em all with equal consideration.

One Sunday a lady came to the Rev. Tweedle after church and says, "That plumber that sits in front of me has such a terrible voice and he can't carry a tune and he insists on singing." She says, "He's ruining the services for me and you'll have'ta give him another pew." The Rev. Tweedle says, "No, I can't do that because he's liable to ask me why I moved him and it would hurt his feelings if I told him, but I'll tell you what I can do. I can ask him to join the choir."

Albert Headley Funeral Rites Set Tomorrow

Retired Assistant Police Superintendent Is Heart Attack Victim.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow at St. Dominic's Church, Sixth and E streets southwest, for Albert J. Headley, former assistant superintendent of he Metropolitan Police Department, who died of a heart attack yesterday at his home, 217 Ninth street southwest.

His retirement two years ago ended 39 years of active service that were marked by many ups and downs.

Mr. Hadley became a "rookie" in 1896 and his beat was the old Southwest section, then known as "Bloodfield." Commendation came his way when he arrested a dangerous murderer. Soon he was known as "bird eye" in that neighborhood because the superstitious believed he had "eyes in the back of his head."

Was Bicycle Officer.

In 1901, Mr. Headley was made a bicycle officer, and a year later he became acting sergeant.

The years that saw Mr. Hadley promoted to a sergeantcy, a lieutenancy, a captaincy also saw the bicycle being replaced by the auto and Washington's traffic problem grow.

And Mr. Headley, first among local officers to realize that recruited the first city-wide traffic squad, originated one-way streets, instituted the permit system and suggested underground parking in the Mall.

There was opposition, violent at times, voiced in newspaper articles and editorials, but where there was a will there was a way. And Mr. Headley stuck to his guns, made speeches, put on demonstrations to make the public traffic-danger conscious and introduced Washingtonians to the new-fangled traffic lights.

In 1923, as head of the Traffic Bureau, Headley drew up Washington's first traffic regulations and designed the shield traffic sign.

Demoted : 1925.

He held that post until June, 1925, when he was demoted and sent as captain to the Fourth Precinct. He was restored to his former rank two years later.

Mr. Headley was named to the rank of assistant superintendent two months before his retirement. The position of assistant superintendent has since been abolished.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Gertrude Headley; a son, Albert J. Headley, jr., and a daughter, Mrs. Roy Musick, all of this city; a sister, Mrs. Elizabeth raig of Chester, and a brother, George Headley, of Philadelphia. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mrs. Ida Kinsell Funeral Thursday

Mrs. Ida J. Kinsell, 78, regent of the Keystone Chapter of the D. A. R. for 20 years, died yesterday at her summer home in Marchand, Pa., it was learned here last night. She had been ill only a short time.

Mrs. Kinsell came to Washington in 1889 with her husband, the late James Kinsell, prominent in the Washington show business for many years.

She was active in founding the Keystone Chapter, and headed the group until her retirement three years ago. At that time she was elected honorary regent of the chapter. It was at her wish that the chapter was named Keystone, in honor of Pennsylvania, her native State. She had also been a member of the Order of Eastern Star.

Mrs. Kinsell made her home in Washington at 1608 Seventeenth street northwest, spending her summers at Marchand. She leaves a son, J. M. Kinsell, of the Seventeenth street address; a daughter, Mrs. Vida Kelly, also of Washington; a brother, H. W. Smeaton, and a sister, Mrs. I. M. Lewis, both of Punxsutawney, Jefferson County, Pa.

Funeral services will be held at her home in Marchand Thursday afternoon, and she will be buried in Mahoning Cemetery there.

Sergt. Warnecke's Rites Tomorrow

Services will be held tomorrow at 9 a. m. in St. Stephen's Catholic Church for Sergt. Francis R. Warnecke, U. S. M. C., retired, World War hero who died Sunday in Naval Hospital. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Motor Head Has Plan To Halve Traffic Toll

Cambridge Mass., Aug. 16 (AP).—A proposal that automobile drivers throughout the country carry "little red books" containing an up to date record of accidents, arrests or convictions today was laid before a traffic engineering training school at Harvard.

The books were one of several measures advocated by Paul G. Hoffman, of Los Angeles, president of the Studebaker Corporation, in a safety program which, he said, would reduce annual automobile fatalities from 36,000 to 18,500 and reduce annual monetary loss from $1,250,000,000 to $800,000,00.

MaritimeBooks Last Audited in '22, House Told

Kennedy Declares Commission's Ledger Not Posted in 8 Months.

Joseph B. Kennedy, chairman of the United States Maritime Commission, charged during hearings on the third deficiency appropriation bill that "no independent audit or appraisal of the commission's properties and finances has been made since 1922," it was revealed last night.

Kennedy, citing this 15-year laxity to illustrate the magnitude of his task, also charged "the general ledger has not been posted for almost eight months." He added:

"When I came into the commission I asked for the last independent audit that had been made, and they gave me one for 1922 . . . I find the books of the commission in a very bad condition."

Bill Denies $10,000,000.

Kennedy made this charge at hearings in which he asked for $10,000,000 outright to start a 95-ship replacement program for the American Merchant Marine, with further authority to make commitments for work totaling $150,000,000.

The bill, as reported yesterday by a House Appropriations Sub-committee, denied Kennedy the $10,000,000, citing general budgetary conditions as justification, but authorized the larger item for future commitments.

The deficiency bill, intended to mop up as the Congress adjourns, will reach the floor very early this week, leaders said.

The amount recommended under the bill is $78,502,875.67, a decrease under budget estimates of $42,899,520.24. In addition to direct appropriations, the bill grants authority to enter into future contracts up to $198,615,000, as against a budget estimate of $176,213,000.

NLRB Asks for More.

The $150,000,000 granted the Maritime Commission, together with $69,000,000 already available and $27,440,000 to be advanced by operating companies which would charter the vessels, would provide $246,440,000 for the ship-building program, designed for the two-fold purpose of building back the merchant marine into a position to handle American commerce and to stand as an up-to-date auxiliary in the event of war.

The most vigorously questioned item in the measure was $932,500 for the National Labor Relations Board, national mediator in labor troubles. The board had a current fiscal year appropriation of $785,000, but asked an increase to $2,585,000, justifying the increase by the great upswing in the number of labor problems handled since the Supreme Court held constitutional the Wagner labor relations act. The subcommittee held the recent increase in cases handled would not necessarily prevail.

Kennedy, asking outside auditors to comb the Maritime Commission's books, said:

"The Comptroller, after a discussion, decided we could not hire outside auditors. I told him I did not think I wanted to be responsible for a balance sheet audit made by our own employes. He said there was no other way, but that they would go ahead and check the financial part of the audit.

"I am still unconvinced the audit will be satisfactory. . . I cannot place any confidence in an auditing organization which has permitted such a condition to obtain whereby the general ledger has not been posted since last October. We are now over a year and a quarter back on our checking of voyage statements."

John W. Slacks, of the commission's finance division, added:

"We do not like to criticize the way the Comptroller may wish to do his particular work . . . But we feel that to have a thoroughly independent check, involves employing an outside accounting firm."

Farm Tenancy Relief Rejected By House Body

Committee Would Defer $20,000,000 Program to Next Year.

By Russell Smith

While visions of irate constituents danced through their heads, House Appropriations Committee members yesterday rejected an integral part of President Roosevelt's legislative program, farm tenancy alleviation.

The committee recommended to the House that the tenancy program be deferred until next year and that none of the $20,000,000 authorized last month be appropriated until the next session of Congress. The $20,000,000 was to have been evenly divided between loans to desirable tenants to purchase their farms, and retirement of submarginal land.

Intimation that the former half, the $10,000,000 for direct aid to tenants seeking to establish themselves on their own farms has little chance was given in the statement of Representative Marvin Jones (Democrat), Texas, that "if I can't get the $10,000,000 for loans to tenants, I will insist on the $10,000,000 for retirement of submarginal land."

Jones to Make Fight.

Jones will make his fight for restoration when the bill is taken up on the floor.

In its report yesterday, the committee said that "there is no emergency," Department of Agriculture plans for administration of the act "are not matured" and "the attack on the problem . . . is purely experimental."

It referred, however, to the printed hearings of the committee, also made public yesterday, for elaboration of these points, and the hearings indicated a vast concern on the part of members of the committee as to constituents' reaction, when they learned they had not been included in the program.

Representatives Clifton Woodrum, of Virginia, the acting chairman of the sub-committee, and Clarence Cannon, of Missouri, both Democrats, were especially concerned over selection of tenants and even of counties. They pointed out repeatedly that only a few tenants could be chosen, thereby creating much ill-feeling among those who had not been selected.

"What would be . . . the kind of letter that his Congressman (hypothetical Farmer Jones') could write to him explaining why the Government can help his neighbor, Farmer Smith, in Botetourt County, but can not reach him in Bedford County?" Woodrum inquired of Milo R. Perkins, acting Resettlement chief.

Woodrum Overwhelmed.

After Perkins had replied that "that would frankly be difficult to answer," Woodrum, with the aid of Cannon, kept hammering on this theme, until finally he said of the problems presented by the act that "it overwhelms me when I think of the difficulties this thing will stir up, when it does not amount to a hill of beans."

Cannon was chiefly concerned with limiting the program to one county in each State.

Cannon also was worried over cost of county farmer committees set up by the bill to pass on eligible tenants. He estimated that, at $45 a month, the $212,000 sought for the committees' expenses would keep each of them in session nearly a year.

"That is terrible," he observed.

Several members of the sub-committee also expressed fears of "regimentation" of tenants because RA, if it administers the program, will insist upon a definite farm plan being followed for each farm, to enable the Government to get its money back.

Gas Fumes Fatal To D. C. Resident

George Smithson, 64, died yesterday noon soon after his wife had found him in a semiconscious condition in the kitchen of their home, 620 Park road. The fire rescue squad's attempt to revive him was unsuccessful.

According to police, there was a strong odor of illuminating gas in the kitchen when they arrived. Mrs. Smithson said the kitchen door was open when she arrived and that none of the stove jets was turned on.

Smithson had been in ill health for two years. Bruises on his face and arms led police to believe he may have fallen against the stove and turned off the jets after becoming partially overcome by the fumes. The coroner is investigating.

Smithson was born in Bristol, England. Until he became ill he was employed as landscape gardener by Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick.

Funeral services will be held at the residence tomorrow at 1:30 p. m., followed by burial in edCar Hill Cemetery.

The program in field camp includes various engineering works such as the construction of regular roadways through the woods and over clear land, the building of small bridges and the laying of corduroy or pole roads. The Guardsmen will hold preliminary contests in the tug-of-war event and also complete their entry list for competitions. Thursday, when the annual regimental field day will be held, with Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen scheduled to be the guest of honor.

Orders issued for the march to Euclid specify that the companies will depart from camp at two-minute intervals and that stops for rest will be called at 8:20 o'clock, 9 and 9:30, for ten minutes at each time. The orders also state that the first duties to be performed in the field camp will be the erection of small military pup tents, establishment of field kitchens and similar work.

Just as he commands the engineers in Camp Ritchie, Col. John W. Oehmann will direct the operations at the field quarters from his headquarters tent. It will be the first field trip for many of the recruits who were not at Indiantown Gap, Pa., last year or at Camp Simms the year before.

The 104th Quartermaster Regiment commanded by Maj. Fletcher F. Bernsdorff will leave Camp Ritchie tomorrow morning, moving also southward on a convoy training trip. Maj. Bernsdorff said overnight halts will be made Tuesday at Winchester, Va., and Wednesday at Cumberland, Md. His troppers will return to camp Thursday noon in time for regimental field day ceremonies and the field meet.

Black Maria Marooned, Prisoners Aid Guards

Bayone, N. J., Aug. 16 (AP).—When a patrol wagon taking four prisoners from the police court to the county jail broke down today 100 feet away from the court, the prisoners cheerfully helped the driver and guard push it back.
